Senator Wenger discusses ag land preservation

"I do not believe land preservation for agriculture runs counter to development," said state Senator Noah Wenger. Scheduled to speak to 200 farmers and their wives at the Sixth Annual Farm Appreciation Day Dinnere for Fidelity Bank in Atglen, PA, Wenger gave his thoughts prior to the meeting.

"If you have agriculture, you also have agri-business and all the huge manufacturing and distribution chains that make up the economy. And since everybody benefits from ag preservation, it's a worthy project for everyone to support. Sometimes developers think ag preservation works against them. But that's not true," the Senator emphasized. "I represent one of the most progressive areas in the state as far as development is concerned. But we need to look at ag land preservation from a business point of view. Farmers must look at it from a business view and so must the general public."

"The farmer who may have financial problems could look to the sale of a land easement to relieve his debt problem and not need to sell the farm out of the family. In that way the restrictions on the deed could benefit both the farm family and preserve the land for agriculture in the future as a benefit to the general society."

In addition, Wenger announced the unanimous senate passage of a bill he supported aimed at assisting farmers whose poultry and swine have been hit with two recent strains of desease. This legislation would appropriate a total of $1.2 million toward the eradification of the most recent outbreak of avian flu in poultry and pseudorabies in swine. The legislation, which has been sent to the house for consideration, would appropriate funds to provide indemnification for live birds and poultry products recently destroyed because of the avian flu to clean and disinfect affected premises and to provide indemnity payments to swine owners who slaughter their swine to help eradicate pseudorabies," Wenger explained. "By securing these funds we are offering both proactive and reactive solutions towards the spread of disease among our states valuable poultry flocks and swine herd," the Senator said.

"Not only are we providing assistance to those farmers who have been directly affected by the disease, we are also taking steps toward preventing their spread." Wenger expressed optimism that the house would act quickly on passage of the farmer-assistance measure.

The local farmers were invited by the Fidelity Bank to the West Fallowfield Christian Day School, Atglen, PA, on Friday evening for a family style meal to let their farm patrons get to know bank personnel better.

USDA official calls for sheep industry overhaul

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — All over the country milk, red meat and poultry producers are discovering that there's nothing free about the free enterprise system. Uncle Sam's begun buying dairy herds, egg producers have written a surplus hen removal clause into their new marketing order and every commodity group has mounted aggressive promotional campaigns aimed at restoring that elusive balance between supply and demand. In the long run, everyone pays.

When it comes to livestock, if American farmers are producing it, then chances are they're producing too much of it...with one exception.

Of all the red meats, lamb is the only commodity being consumed at a greater rate than it's being produced in this country, says Dixon Hubbard. A livestock and veterinary sciences staff leader with USDA, Hubbard was the keynote speaker at two sheep meetings held in Berks and Lancaster Counties this week.

Addressing Lancaster County sheep producers at the Farm and Home Center on Thursday evening, Hubbard warned that the industry would have to come to grips with its weaknesses before sheep producers could take advantage of their enviable position in the marketplace.

First and foremost on Hubbard's list of industry bugaboos is the problem of uneven supply. "This was the number-one problem that the sheep industry brought to me back in 1967," Hubbard said, noting that little has been done to alleviate the problem in the last 20 years.

Although some producers have pointed the finger at the packing industry for not responding to demand for lamb, the problem really lies with producers themselves, Hubbard emphasized.

Everett R. Newswanger

Former editor returns to Lanc Farming

After an interim of nearly 15 years, a former editor of Lancaster Farming newspaper has returned to the farm news beat this week as managing editor of this newspaper. Everett R. Newswanger, who served first as staff reporter and then as editor for a five-year period beginning in the sixties has been named managing editor of Lancaster Farming, according to Robert G. Campbell, Publisher of the widely distributed farm weekly.

A graduate of Paradise High School in 1953, Newswanger earned credits in Journalism from the University of Oklahoma and News Writing from Penn State University. Most recently he was associated with Trade Tech Management, Inc., of Lancaster and was instrumental in the development of a commodities trading system that effectively measures market pressures.

Newswanger has served clients in marketing, advertising and public relations both from his personal business associations and as an account representative for the Joseph Hull's advertising agency in Lancaster. He has written copy for numerous ads, product releases, slide shows and travel guides. As a professional

These frisky steers got a taste of new grass this week while the farmer out on the hill could enjoy the first field work of the season. Colorful flowers, sprouting green-yellow leaves, grass tall enough to blanket the meadows and the warm weather of early spring make this time of year a welcome respite from the cold drab winter. This scene from "Lancaster Farming Territory" came into the viewfinder of Everett Newswanger's camera along Kissel Hill Road near the corner of Oregon Road, Lancaster County.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, Apr. 10, 1986

Market Comment: Demand for ready to cook whole birds was very good and current production was well-cleared. Cutlets and breasts were tight for a fairly good call. Wings were short as demand was brisk and unfilled. Legs and leg quarters were clearing satisfactorily and were no more than adequate overall. Less than trucklot asking prices were one cent higher at 50-57 cents. Live supplies were moderate. Weights were irregular with several plants having trouble in filling orders on 2½ lb. sizes. Slaughter was moderately heavy. Undertone was firm.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva:

Estimated 4/10 1,962,000; Actual 4/3 1,643,000.

Actual 4/8 1,943,000.

Average Weights 4/8 4.43, 4/1 4.43.

Eastern PA and NJ Poultry

Wednesday, Apr. 9, 1986
Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices were unchanged to as much as one cent lower. Movement of light type for shipment into Canada increased in the New England section, and outside buying interest from Midwest processors was fair. Locally, demand was fair for the ample offerings, with most processor bookings ranging up to four weeks.

Prices Paid at Farm:

Light Type Hens: 5½-6, mostly 5¾-6.

F.O.B. Plant: 8¾-9.

PENNFIELD PROMOTES DAIRY PROFIT PROGRAM

Records showing the true cost to produce 100 lbs. of milk or a bushel of corn are the basis for determining profitability.

WHY GOOD RECORDS?

Good financially sound businesses have as their foundation a good accounting system that provides accurate records showing the operating conditions on a timely basis. The good manager is able to use these records to:

1) correct profitability problems,
2) plan necessary cash requirements,
3) analyze feasibility of equipment purchases and
4) develop future operating plans.

PROGRAM GUIDELINES

In order to insure the financial soundness of our dairy customers, Pennfield is establishing a program to promote timely and accurate dairy profit management. To participate in Pennfield's Dairy Profit Program, the dairyman needs the following:

1) An approved farm financial records program;
2) The records program must have the operation set up by enterprise.
   i/e. 1) cropping, 2) dairy, 3) poultry;
3) The records program must furnish accurate monthly reports for each enterprise.

PENNFIELD PAYS

For approved customers participating in the Pennfield Dairy Profit Program, Pennfield will help the dairyman pay for his 1986 farm financial records program.
Payment will be based as follows:

$1.00 per ton of complete feed purchased
$3.00 per ton of concentrate purchased up to 50% of the total bill, but not to exceed $300.00

APPROVED PROGRAMS

1) P.F.A. New-improved cash flow program "AG-CAPS" the agricultural computerized accounting profits system.
2) Farm Credit Service - "AGRIFAX SYSTEMS"

THIS PROGRAM IS EFFECTIVE FOR THE 1986 CALENDAR YEAR!

Not a very nice job

Because so much rides on the final outcome of the herd buyout program, these animals on sign-up farms must be permanently identified. That's only fair to everyone involved. This includes the dairyman who chose to remain in business, the officials who must carry out the program and the tax payers who foot more than half of the bill.

A farmer we talked to this week said he certainly didn't want these buyout animals showing up in someone's milking parlor a few months or years, down the road. And we agree!

But how these condemned cows and heifers are branded should be scrutinized. Certainly ear tags are not permanent enough. They can be changed or removed out behind the barn. But to hot brand these animals on the cheek seems unnecessarily cruel. And on the rump probably hurts too. Officially, the brand is to only remove the hair and not burn the hide. But that's impractical in the actual operation. The animal is going to get burned that's for sure.

Of course in western states cattle have been identified by a brand on the side for many years. But somehow to be branded to live seems different than to be branded to die.

In a letter to the editor of this newspaper last week, Sally Fairbairn of Fleischmanns, New York, suggested that freeze branding would be a better solution–not as hard on the animal and not as dangerous to the person who applies the brand. But not many people seem to know how to freeze brand.

While we may not find the perfect solution, let's everyone try to do our best with a job that's not going to be very nice any way you look at it.

It's time to recognize Pa Poultry Products

Now that the avian influenza has been declared over by the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture, it's time other states and countries recognize the fact and lift the embargo on our Pennsylvania poultry products.

Recently state agricultural secretary Richard E. Grubb sent this request to 17 other states. These states included: Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, and Puerto Rico. In addition, copies of the letter were sent to the governments of Canada, Brazil, Japan, Venezuela, Great Britain,, and Argentina.

We believe that the virus has been eliminated from our state poultry flocks. And in view of our surveilance and quaranteen program, we now provide the safest place in the nation to buy poultry and poultry productrs. And the quicker everyone around the world recognizes this fact, the better off all of us will be.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Incorporate Manure

Many barns, poultry houses and feed lots will be cleaned out in the next few weeks. We repeat the suggestion that this material be either injected into the soil or worked into the topsoil within a few days after application. This will not only preserve more fertilizer elements but will reduce odors and preserve good public relations with your neighbors.

Discing, chiseling or plowing after the waste application is strongly recommended. Livestock and poultry manure have considerable fertilizer value when applied into the soil before exposed to weathering. We urge our farmers to recognize this organic fertilizer and utilize it fully.

We hope our non-farm people understand that applying manure to our fields is part of farming and part of rural living. It may be unpleasant for a short time, but as far as I know, rural odors have never been proven to be a health hazard. We hope everyone tries to understand the needs and cares of others.

To Start Grazing Gradually

With the early warm spell this spring, we are seeing rapid growth in most pasture areas. This will also be true with producers who are planning to graze winter grains such as rye or barley. The herd or flock should be controlled at first, and not allowed on the area for more than a half hour; bloating and scouring may result if they consume too much of the bush forage the first few days.

Also, it's best to feed the animals some dry matter such as hay, silage or straw before turning them out to pasture the first few times. Dairy farmers should keep milking cows from the grazing area at least four to five hours before the milking period.

To Check Water Supplies

Your water supply should be checked at least once a year for nitrates and bacteria. Nitrates can get into ground water from several sources — from a septic field, a barnyard or feedlot, silage seepage or from nitrogen fertilizer on surrounding cropland.

Nitrogen can travel farther through the soil than bacteria, with the likelihood that more wells may be polluted with nitrates than with bacteria. And, nitrates can be dangerous. Nitrogen in drinking water reduces the ability of the blood to carry oxygen and causes symptoms of oxygen deficiency in people and animals.

If your drinking water hasn't been checked within the last year, then do it now. Also, if you notice any changes in your water, such as an off-color, an unusual flavor or even an odor, then be sure to have it tested immediately. Remember, these samples should be taken to the lab in either a container provided by the lab or a sterilized bottle.

To Manage Alfalfa Stands

With nearly every species of livestock, the feeding of top quality alfalfa hay or silage is highly recommended.

At dairy meetings we hear how good alfalfa is in the ration, and at sheep meetings we learn that good alfalfa hay is the backbone of the live feeding program. Alfalfa meal is often used as a source of protein in other rations. It all adds up to the fact that alfalfa is one of our most important forage crops.

Every farmer should make a special effort to produce maximum amounts per acre. This takes cutting management along with proper lime, fertilizer, insect and disease control. Since we are now at the beginning of another cropping season, more attention to alfalfa might benefit many farmers. Don't be satisfied with a poor stand. The crop is worthy of our best effort.

FARM FORUM
OUR READERS WRITE

Dear Sir:

Several weeks ago there was an article about the PFA quizzing gubernatorial hopefuls. Did you misquote some when they said they wouldn't sign a returnable bottle bill? I wouldn't vote for anyone opposed to a deposit on beverage containers.

The issue should receive more attention in the agricultural press. All candidates profess at least lip service to the family farm, improved income, more funding for ag programs and rural developement. Differences need to be pointed out.

The only time to pick up bottles and cans along the road is after the snow melts and before new growth starts. Only a returnable container law with a deposit will reduce litter.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

CONVINCING THE SCOFFERS

April 13, 1986

Background Scripture: Jude.
Devotional Reading: John 10:22-30.

Dr. David C. McClelland, a professor of psychology and social relations at Harvard University, has spent almost 40 years in researching human motivation. This research has sought to determine whether people really want what they say and think they want.

In one of his research projects, he showed to a group of Harvard undergraduates a motion picture film of Mother Teresa, the Nobel Laureate Roman Catholic nun, caring for the sick and dying in the slums of Calcutta. When asked, "What did you think of Mother Teresa?", the undergraduates split approximately 50-50. About half of them thought she was wonderful, while the other half were negative in their response. The latter response was typified by one student who said, "I dislike her intensely, all this religiosity. It's fake. . ."

T.L.C.

By measuring the amount of immunoglobulin A secreted in their saliva, Dr. McClelland was able to discern how each of the students reacted to the Mother Teresa film on an unconscious level. Dr. McClelland found that the negative opinions they voiced did not correspond to the positive chemical reactions recorded in their saliva. In a report printed in the Journal of the Institute for the Advancement of Health, Dr. McClelland concluded, "To me, the results mean that she was contacting these consciously disapproving people in a part of their brains that they were unaware of and that was still responding to the strength of her tender loving care." So, although it appeared that her loving service made no impact whatsoever upon approximately 50% of the group, nevertheless, on an unconscious level these people were being significantly and positively affected by her loving witness for Christ.

KEEP IN LOVE

Dr. McClelland seems to confirm what many Christians have long suspected: that their witness for Christ does not fail simply because people either reject it or ignore it. Even when people seem not to be responding to our witness of Christian love, there may be deep, unconscious impressions within them that later may have the affect of convincing them of the truth and power of Christianity.

Thus, Jude admonishes us to "keep yourselves in the love of God" and later says, "And convince some, who doubt. . ." (vs. 21, 22). With love, we can!

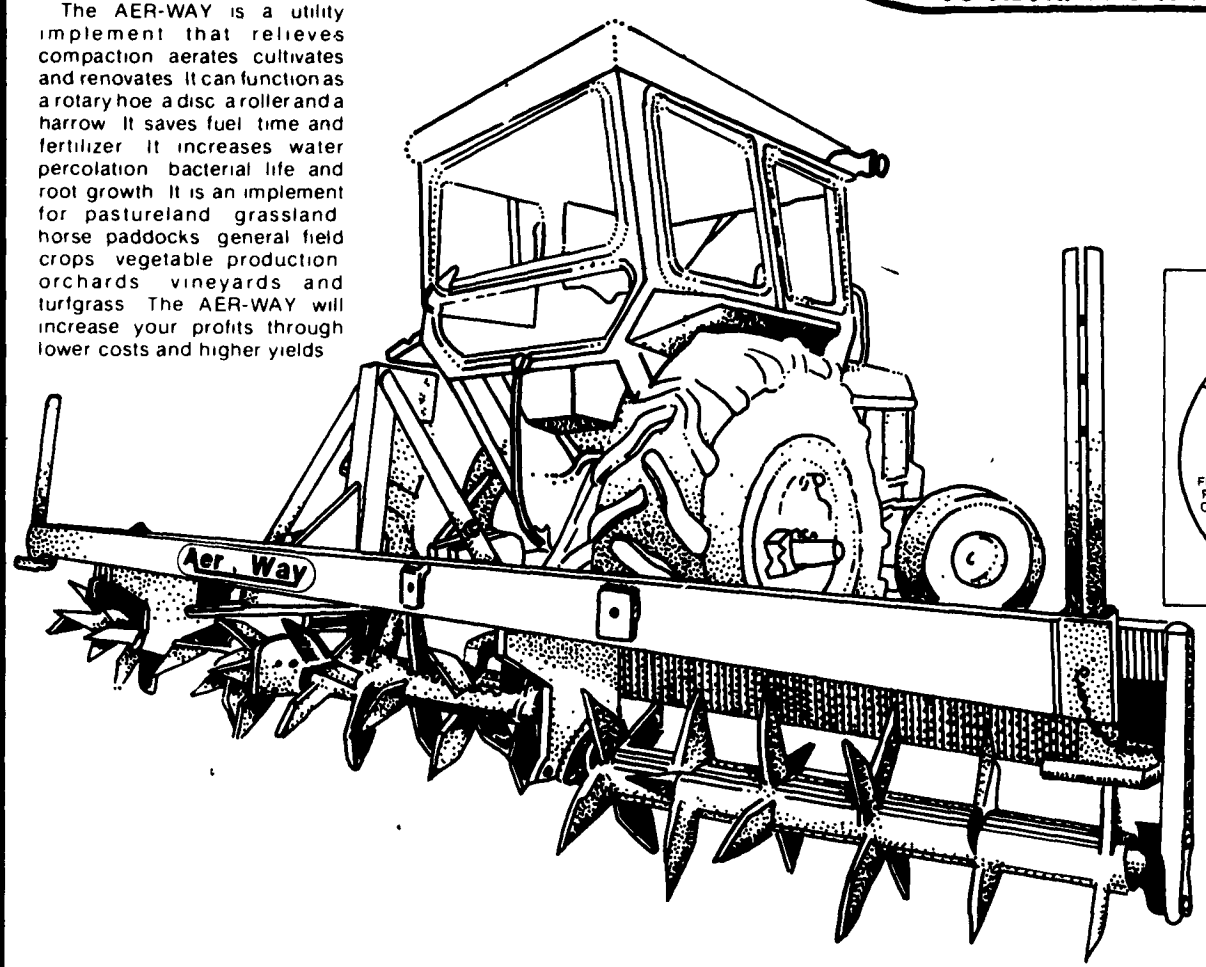
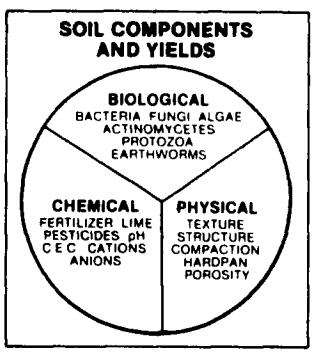
Aer Way™

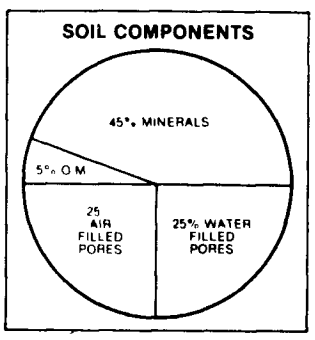
THE BETTER WAY
TO REVITALIZE THE SOIL AND INCREASE YIELD

The AER-WAY is a utility implement that relieves compaction aerates cultivates and renovates It can function as a rotary hoe a disc a roller and a harrow It saves fuel time and fertilizer It increases water percolation bacterial life and root growth It is an implement for pastureland grassland horse paddocks general field crops vegetable production orchards vineyards and turfgrass The AER-WAY will increase your profits through lower costs and higher yields



SOIL — "Our Most Valuable Asset"





All plants require a fertile soil in which to grow, but fertility alone is not enough Plants also need water and air to produce a good crop Adequate soil moisture is necessary for a good yield Lack of water or too much water both adversely affect yield

Air within the soil is necessary for plant root systems to utilize the nutrients In the absence of air, the root system loses its ability to utilize the applied fertilizers and lime which are therefore wasted

Crops growing on loose well aerated soils will develop extensive root systems that reach into all portions of the soil profile Selecting the AER-WAY is the key to putting your soil in good condition and keeping it productive in the future

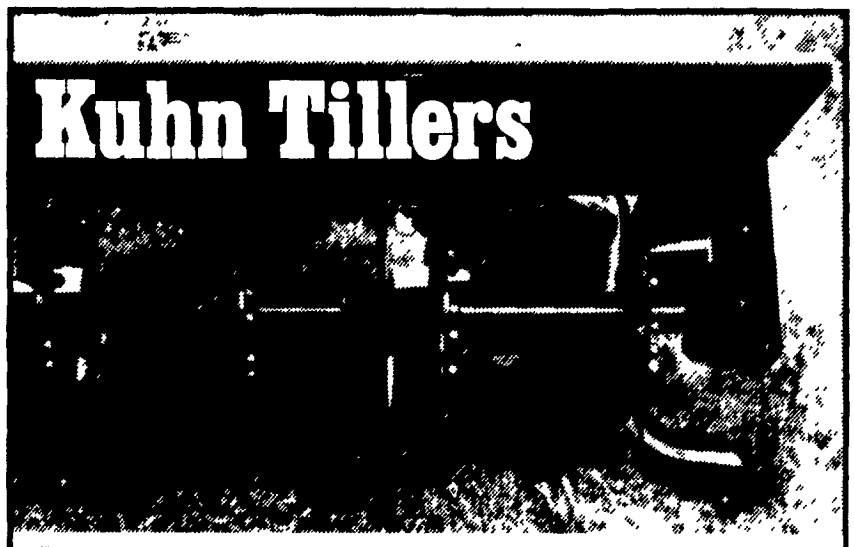
Kuhn Tillers



Built Tough To Last

Right through the line—from the smallest with 30-inch working width to the largest 120-inch model—Kuhn tillers are engineered for durability and efficiency Durable so they won't break down under heavy going or long hours Efficient so they operate smoothly don t clog do a thorough job of aerating topsoil and blending in residues

Wear-resistant heavy-duty blades penetrate soil cleanly are faced outwards to prevent clogging Side plates designed to prevent soil ejection from the sides of the rotor housing and solid support is provided at each side of the cover Full width tillage Completely enclosed drive shaft to the precision heat-treated gears and a heavy-duty gearbox to resist shock loads and wear Gearbox construction—with no chains or belts—provides a unit that is practically maintenance free

Front mounted guide wheels as standard equipment (skids available as optional equipment) give precise depth control and maneuverability

Whatever your tilling needs call on Kuhn to turn under crop residues clean stubble rejuvenate grassland, or provide good soil aeration and irrigation in orchards vineyards market gardens landscaping or for large homeowners Six complete tiller series with efficient power needs of as little as 12 to 35 h p up to 140 tractor h p for the largest models

W-L Alfalfas lead the field in Pennsylvania Growers Competition.

"W-L is definitely a high quality seed. The varieties are dependable, the crop is more persistent, and I think the hay quality is better. Last year I took four cuttings, and the fourth looked just like the first."

Carl Kreider, Quarryville
Grand Champion
Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council

Winner	Yield/Acre*	Crude Protein (in lbs.)	Total Digestible Nutrients (in lbs.)
Carl Kreider Lancaster County	10 48 tons	4,320	12,264
John Tautin Crawford County	7 81 tons	3,608	9,770
Robert Glenn Lawrence County	6 97 tons	2,783	8,136

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

In Washington the Congress passed a new farm bill that "called for reinstallment of rigid price supports at 90 percent parity." Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson objected to the bill and called it "not acceptable".

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Texas) said he would keep the Senate in session Wednesday night to get a vote. Republican house leaders had sought support for a substitute bill, which they hoped President Eisenhower would sign.

In Des Moines, Iowa, former President Harry S. Truman called the opposition the most flagrant example of political betrayal he had ever seen.

Earl J. Groff, Strasburg R1, has been named to his third term as president of the Pennsylvania State Association of Artificial Breeders.

One load of Prime 1270 lb. steers brought $22.90 at the Lancaster Union Stock Yards as total number of receipts set a new record. The opening of trout fishing looks good for Sunday.

Penn State Inka Pathfinder Star became the first holstein cow in America to produce over 1,000 pounds of butterfat in each of five successive lactations.

Schuylkill Co. fair to hold auction

The Schuylkill County Fair Association, a non-profit organization, is seeking items for their annual fundraising consignment sale on Saturday, April 19th at the Fairgrounds. Fourteen new farm implements, garden and lawn tractors, wood stove, band meat saw, gun, craft items and more are already on the auction block. However, the Association needs many more items as they have run into unforeseen expenditures.

Sale items may be delivered to the Fairgrounds from 8:30 a.m. till dark Monday through Friday, April 14-18. A loader will be available for heavy items. Consignment commissions are very reasonable. Items may also be donated but must be in working order or good condition. Dealers and crafters may also reserve table space. The Auctioneer will be George Blum.

For more information call Craig R. Morgan, Friedensburg, 739-2627.

Interest Rates on FmHA programs lowered

WASHINGTON – Interest rates were lowered on most loan programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration beginning April 1, according to Vance L. Clark, agency administrator.

In farmer programs, the rates on operating loans will drop from 10.25 percent to 9.50 percent. The rates will go down from 10.75 percent to 10.25 percent on farm ownership, soil and water, and Indian land acquisition loans.

The rate for limited resource loans will go from 7.25 percent to 6.50 percent for operating purposes and from 5.25 percent to 5 percent for ownership purposes.

In housing programs, the interest rate will be reduced from 10.625 percent to 9.50 percent for single family houses, rural rental housing and rural housing site loans.

For community facility and water and waste disposal loans, the market interest rate will be 7.125 percent, down from 8.375 percent, and the intermediate rate will be 6.125 percent, down from 6.625 percent. The poverty line rate remains at 5 percent. These interest rates are calculated quarterly, based on the current average cost of municipal bonds.

Clark said the new rates reflect a decrease in the cost of money to the government and they should be beneficial to rural residents and especially farmers who depend heavily on credit.

Sheep industry

Packers simply cannot afford to adjust slaughter rates to accommodate the highs and lows of seasonal lamb production. "If production were evenly distributed throughout 12 months, the packing industry could handle all we produce," he said.

The fact that sheep producers are sitting on a potential gold mine is evidenced by Rocco Enterprises' willingness to sink large amounts of capital into their current lamb venture, said Hubbard. The well-known Virginia-based turkey processor created a stir within the red meat industry last year by announcing its intention to slaughter 10,000 lambs a week at its Rocco Further Processing facility located in Timberville.

Rocco's approach to insuring a year-round supply of lamb has been to insist on using ewes with year-round breeding potential in its contract agreements.

Whether or not Rocco's strategy will pay dividends remains to be seen, said Hubbard, adding that the future of the industry depends on producers' willingness to adopt progressive management strategies such as year-round lambing. At the present time, however, American sheep producers aren't even good enough managers to compete with the price and availability of New Zealand lamb on their own turf. "We're no longer the most efficient producers of agricultural products in the world," Hubbard said.

The USDA official's overhaul of the industry includes new product development, a factor, he said, that has played a major role in the poultry industry's ability to claim an increasing percentage of consumers' food dollars. Here again, said Hubbard, the answer lies in the grower's willingness to increase his production efficiency and volume. "A variety of sheep products won't be developed until the supply of sheep meat is big enough to make it profitable," he said.

"Ewe will love 'em," says enterprising meat marketer Eugene Gagliardi of his patented lamb cuts. Pictured with the inventor of "Steak-umms" is one-half of a lamb prepared à la Gagliardi.

But increasing the supply of lamb doesn't mean increasing the size of the lamb, cautioned Eugene Gagliardi, the evening's second speaker. Gagliardi is best known as the inventor of the popular frozen meat product called "Steak-umms".

The owner of Southdown Meat Co. Inc., of West Chester, Gagliardi finally turned his creative muse loose on the lamb industry about three years ago. "I thought for years and years that lamb was being presented wrong," he said, noting that all that was needed to increase lamb's popularity was a more attractive and convenient array of lamb products.

After carving some 100 lamb carcasses, Gagliardi came up with nine lamb cuts (all patent-pending) that minimize carcass waste, and, he claims, provide more edible meat per ounce than any other cuts on the market. All cuts can be cooked in less than an hour and can easily be carved by the cook with a kitchen knife.

Gagliardi also guards against any strong, muttony taste by removing the thin white membrane, or fel, from the surface of the meat. Bones that stand in the way of easy carving are removed, and fat cover is limited to no more than one-eight of an inch.

One of the factors traditionally limiting lamb's acceptance by consumers has been large cuts that result in mountains of leftovers. Gagliardi's secret to providing cuts of convenient size is to work with the smaller New Zealand lamb carcasses that top out at no more than 45 pounds. American lambs are simply too big, he says, pointing out that current showring trends are out of touch with the real world of meat production.

Gagliardi also encourages sales by printing appropriate lamb recipes on each individually wrapped cut of lamb that bears his "Lamb Lovers Gourmet Cuts" label. "Ewe will love 'em," reads the logo.

Judging by public acceptance thus far, he just may be right. The U.S. Army has agreed to stock its commissaries from Maine to Virginia with Gourmet Cuts, and two Philadelphia-based chain stores have done likewise. "The reception has been phenomenal," says Gagliardi.

How some corn growers are managing spring inputs to maximize their net return at harvest:

Passage of the 1985 Farm Bill is causing growers across the corn belt to take a new look at production practices. With land going out of production, it's more important than ever to get the most out of every acre you plant.

In this situation, the value of your spring inputs should be measured by their effect on your net return at harvest. But how do you make that crucial business decision now?

Many corn growers keep detailed computerized records of every field they farm—and everything that goes into them. And they test—hybrids, fertilizers, insecticides, herbicides. All with one goal in mind, maximizing net income.

On his 500 acres of corn, Tom Juncker of Mount Vernon, Indiana found that Lasso® herbicide is one input that can help him do just that. In Tom's words: "The most obvious way to increase your income is to increase your productivity. And with Lasso, we proved that we can do that."

Around the country, thousands of corn growers like Tom have tested Lasso or pre-mixed Lasso & atrazine on their own farms. And seven out of ten have seen those products outyield Dual* or Bicep* herbicides. The extra yield advantage consistently averaged better than four bushels per acre—the same average that was seen in ten straight years of university tests.

It's the kind of average that can make a significant difference to any corn grower's bottom line.

A FORMULA FOR SUCCESS

With 600 acres in corn, Pat Delanty of Charter Oak, Iowa thinks any increase in yield is worth getting. Pat said: "The bottom line is what I'm looking at. So any additional yield is important to me. I look at the extra bushels per acre that I got with Lasso and multiply them out over all the acres I farm. Even at the existing market price, it's significant."

What would a few extra bushels per acre mean to you? See for yourself by using this formula: yield advantage × price per bushel × number of acres = extra income.

If the price of corn is $2.50, four extra bushels will give you $10.00 extra per acre. $1,000 extra income for every 100 acres you farm.

Certainly you can't afford to pass up any increase you can get. Not in the tight economy we face today.

Think about it now as you put your herbicide program together. You need to choose inputs that will return more for your money season after season—inputs like Lasso or pre-mixed Lasso & atrazine. The herbicides that give you less stress. And more yield.

One of 5 cows over 30,000 pounds

Lancaster County cow sets national record

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

BAINBRIDGE — Three years ago the Fertrell herd was established with basic hard-working cows that were bought at reasonable prices.

Today they are setting national records. Their crop of 24 two-year-old heifers are projected to produce, in a 305 day lactation, 21,456 pounds of milk and 652 pounds of fat indicate they will be producing national records in the future.

Pack-Herd Jemini Brigade is the first cow from Fertrell to top national records. The records she established were in the senior four-year-old cow milk category, milking two times a day, in both the 305 days and 365 days divisions.

Her 305 day record, set at 40,527 M, 3.9 percent and 1,590 F, also qualified for a third place ranking in the fat category. "Brigade's" 365 day production of 46,900 M, 3.9 percent and 1,846 F also merited a second place ranking in the fat category.

These official DHIA production records were confirmed this week as new leaders in the respected categories by the National Holstein office in Brattleboro, VT.

"Brigade" was pursued through her lactation for this title by her stablemate Aqua-Lan Alida Sensation Abby. "Abby" completed a lactation of 44,176 M and 1,417 F that qualified as a third place National record ranking.

This Shardale Arlinda Chief Jemini daughter established the record, according to the herdsman team of Steve and Annette Kuball, with no extraordinary treatment. "We just managed her properly and met her nutritional requirements," Annette said."

These two nationally-recognized cows and all of the original 90 cows were bought three years ago, when cow prices were substantially higher, for an average price of $1,500. "Brigade," the highest priced cow, came to the farm with a $2,200 price tag.

Fertrell established this herd in 1983 as a "show and tell type of farm that demonstates what can be accomplished under ordinary farm conditions," according to Rufus Miller, president of the organization. "We are not doing anything new or revolutionary that hasn't been done before. We have just taken the best systems and incorporated them with our feeding philosophies," Miller continued.

This farm, located just outside of Bainbridge, which uses a basic liquid manure system, a controlled environment tie stall barn, hutches, a loose housing set-up for dry cows and heifers, also feeds approximately six times per day.

The routine begins at about 4:30 every morning when Steve comes to the barn and feeds the cows hay. "We feed hay first thing to get the the bugs in the rumen working," Steve said. Grain is the next on menu. This is fed after the cows have had ample time to consume the first course of hay and the stomach juices are at a pH level conducive to digestion.

After the high group is milked, they are turned out to the bunk feeder for corn silage, haylage and exercise. The lower group is brought in, milked and fed grain to meet their production level at this time.

When the high group is returned to the barn they are once again fed corn silage and grain. The manger is swept and the orts fed to the low group outside. An additional feeding of grain is then added to the bunk. This portion of the routine is accomplished by 11:00 a.m.

Prior to the evening's milking this feeding schedule is repeated with the addition of hay as the last course on the menu. This provides the cows with something to munch on throughout the night and it keeps the rumen stimulated for a longer period. The last feeding occurs around 9:00 p.m.

Steve admits a TMR program would be easier, however, they feel it is more beneficial to the cows to feed them in this manner. They are able to target each ingredient to its optimum level for each individual cow.

They feed different sources of proteins to attain a variety of release. They want by-pass proteins as well as rumen degradable proteins in the diet. Their major source of protein is roasted whole fat beans. The roasting keeps the oil in the bean and provides the cow with extra energy.

"Brigade" will eat up to 95 pounds of dry matter per day at the peak of her production. In order to get this much feed into her, Fertrell maintains a proper environment, feeds high quality forages, and uses appetite enhancers, such as Rumi-Culture.

"One goal we have is to make all the conditions suitable for feed consumption. After all you have to get enough feed into them for them to make the records we're seeing," Steve noted.

They begin to fit the cows for the dry period in the last third of the cow's lactation. While they don't want any extra weight on the cow, they do begin to flesh her out with a working coat of firm flesh not fat.

"This enables the cows to reach their high production peaks easier and with less stress," Steve said, "since they maintain this coat and it provides strength for the upcoming lactation." When the cows are dry, the Kuballs lead feed one pound of protein and have found this to eliminate any ketosis problems.

Rumi-Cult, a feed supplement, is also fed at a rate of 1 to 2 pounds per day about two weeks prior to calving. They also take care when "fitting" the dry cow to add extra phosphorus to the ration to develop a two to one calcium ratio.

Dry cows are not fed corn silage or haylage, rather they receive baled oat hay. This increases the carbohydrate level and serves as an energy and roughage source. During the dry period the cows are on pasture every day to maintain tone, not as a feed source.

When drying a cow off they dry treat with antibiotics or the probiotic, Fresh Start to tone up the udder.

Immune products are the preferred choice at Fertrell. "We don't like to use any more drugs than necessary," Annette explained.

"With immune products, you are building rather than destroy sytems. Eventually the system will get away from using antibiotics," Miller noted. The feeding theory at Fertrell is "to direct a lot of attention towards a preventive nutrition program," Miller added.

The dry cows are housed with the bred heifers in half of a loose housing barn. The other half is utilized by the low production group. The low group is used to either prep for the high group or the dry group.

The barn is used for milking and houses the high production group. This barn is classified as a controlled environment. It has an automatic ventilation system whereby the pressure opens vents to permit a uniform airflow to each cow.

Fans, that are individually and thermostatically controlled, were added to stir the air and prevent any dead spots from existing in the barn. This aids in maintaining a consistent air flow. When a proper ventilation and temperature is present, it also serves as an aid in digestion and encourages a cow to continue to eat.

Kuballs, who have the sole responsibility for the herd, watch every little detail to make sure that a cow does not go off feed. "We are looking at the total health of a cow, and try to keep all the systems working in the proper sequence," Annette noted.

Each cow has her hooves trimmed yearly, some cows will see the trimmer more often if a problem arises.

They observe the hair coat which is "a sign of intestinal health," Steve said. The manure is also an indicator of how a cow is digesting. As Miller explained, "It is an artful science to be able to look at a stool and know if the cow is passing to much fiber or grain."

With these methods they have developed a herd that is averaging 22,432 pounds of milk, 735 pounds of fat, and 702 pounds of protein on twice a day milking. Up to this point, the cows that have been setting the records were bred by someone else.

The first heifer with Fertrell's prefix and breeding will freshen in two weeks.

Steve subscribes to the aAa method for breeding cows. The bulls that he uses must be backed by a minimum of two excellent dams and fit the type analysis. In order to get uniformity and reinforce the gene pool of the herd, he is also employing linebreeding.

Tidy Burke Elevation, Osborndale Ivanhoe and ABC Reflection Sovereign are the bulls which Steve would like to double or triple linebreed with these cows. He is also interested in sires with Browndale Christina, Great View Mindy Star, Great View Morning Star or Glen Rich Citation Roxy in their pedigrees.

These seven animals are what he would like to use as a foundation to produce his ultimate goal - cows with high test, production, type and longevity.

Presently the cows and heifers are bred completely A.I. "Any animals that cannot be settled this way are culled. It's survival of the fittest," Steve explains. "When we can produce a bull that is of the caliber we want, then we will use one," he continued.

The Kuballs have been in charge of the herd for the entire three years of its existence. They plan to continue developing high quality, record producing cows until the entire barn is filled with excellent, 30,000 pound cows.

Annette notes that these records aren't possible without dedication and management.

Judging from what they have accomplished to date, and the strong projection they have for the future with their present two-year olds, one can conclude the Kuballs and Fertrell Farms will be around in the future.

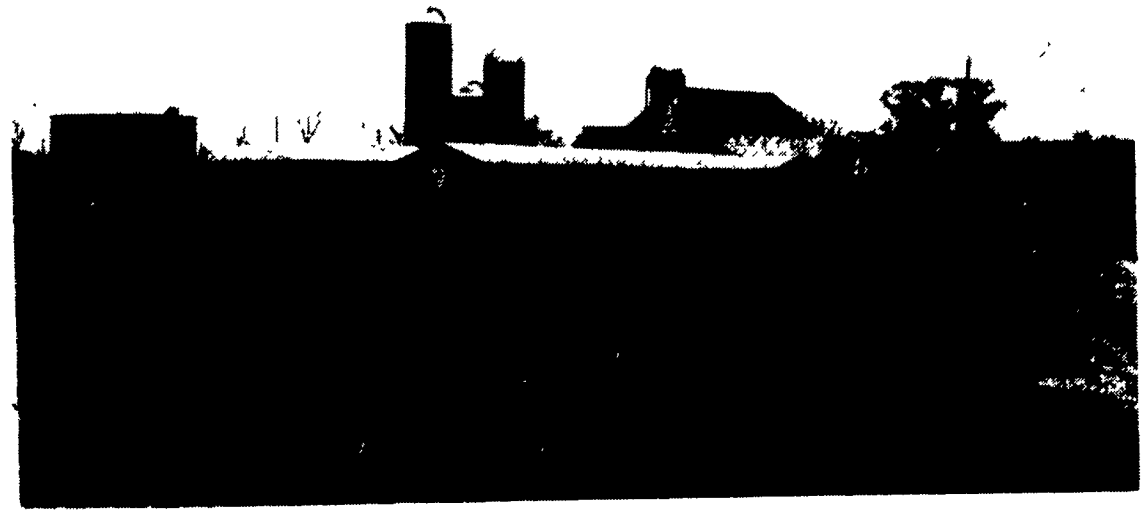
The high group is housed in a tie stall, controlled environment barn. The fans, regulated by a thermostat to turn on independently and at various degree intervals, aid in eliminating any dead air spots in the barn.



Fertrell Farms, located outside Bainbridge, is home to Pack-Herd Jemini Brigade.

Globe Run dispersal set

PETERSBURG — The Globe Run herd, well known for their showing and breeding accomplishments, will be holding a complete milking herd dispersal and select heifer sale on April 19.

Owners, John and Annabelle Foster, will be selling 125 cows and 50 head of calves. The entire milking herd will be sold with the exception of a few 4-H projects. The 50 heifers and calves which will be sold represent a cross section of the herd and range from new born calves to bred heifers.

This is one of the best type herds for its size in Pennslyvania. Their October 1985 BAA on 125 head was 104.1. The rolling herd average from January was 15,946 pounds of milk, 582 pounds of fat, and 497 pounds of protein.

Seven excellent cows will be among those that are sold. These cows were sired by Pete, Elevation, Bootmaker, Standout, Milu and Ideal. Other great sires such as Valiant, Sexation, Tony and Chief will also be represented.

This sale will commence at 10:30 a.m. at the Foster's farm in Petersburg. For information on the sale contact the Cattle Exchange at 607-746-2226.

USDA researchers develop onion variety

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is extending the comment period on its Jan. 29 proposal to establish facility and equipment requirements for a new method of poultry inspection.

According to Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, the comment period will end April 14. The comment period originally was scheduled to end Feb. 28.

"We received a request from the National Broiler Council to extend the comment period to allow more time to review the proposal and respond to it," said Houston.

Comments on the proposal may be sent, in duplicate, to: FSIS Hearing Clerk, USDA, Room 3803 South Building, Washington, D.C. 20250.

HAY! Where's the leaf?

If your livestock could talk, they might be asking that question. You could be needlessly losing up to half of the ALFALFA and CLOVER leaves because of leaf shatter. Some rotary head tedders can beat much of the protein-rich leaves off the stems - leaving them in the field. (That can cost you money in lost nutritional value because 80% of the protein is in the leaves.)

Investor concerns dairy producers

A privately owned Dublin, Ireland firm, Masstock International, that plans to build five, 1,000-cow dairies in Georgia over the next several years each with the capacity to expand to 2,000 head has created much concern among Upper Midwest dairy producers and has, once again, caused agricultural producers to question national policy intent.

While experts say the time for Southern expansion is now because of more dairy product demand than is locally produced, Upper Midwest producers are facing a decline in price supports and are worried about whether markets are going to be there tomorrow.

It has traditionally been one of agriculture's problems, Here's Info anchorman Phil Allen pointed out in a recent NFO radio program. "We (the government) keep giving tax shelters to big corporations who build such things as multi-cow dairy operations and pig parlors. We don't seem to grasp the connection between this kind of tax sheltering and overproduction."

The 1985 Farm Act, Allen continued, has a provision for encouraging dairy farms to get rid of whole herds – in other words to get out of dairying – but the tax shelters remain in the law to encourage big non-farm investors to move in with brand new big production dairy farm set-ups.

Studies done by the Center for Rural Affairs research an advocacy group at Walthill, Neb., have gone into the workings of these tax shelters. Chuck Hassebrook, one of their researchers, says every cow is a potential tax shelter with a 500-cow dairy producing as much as an $84,000 tax advantage.

"Any tax sheltered non-farm investor runs counter to the public policy we say we believe in," Allen continued. "In fact, you could make this statement about not just dairy, but about any ag commodity. Real efforts are being made by the most thoughtful people in agriculture to manage supply – to fit it to existing markets. So, it's just simply bad public policy to continue tax shelters for investors who start up new ag operations and need not care so much whether they are profitable."

Dave Schweers, a NFO dairy spokesman, agreed with Allen's commentary. "We have a national program to decrease milk production in the United States. We have other laws such as investment credit and depreciation, but there are states that are willing to give property tax abatements and counties that are willing to do the same thing in order to encourage more milk production. The county in Georgia is looking at the plant operating as well as the employees to man the dairies and plants," he said. "From a standpoint of national policy, we are taking these jobs away from somebody else and, at the present time, those jobs belong to independent farm families in the Upper Midwest."

Schweers added that unless the United States is going to ban foreign investment in agriculture production facilities in all the states, then in essence, the U.S. is saying, "Come on in." Georgia, he pointed out, is not among the states that have banned foreign agricultural investors.

Beyond public policy, however, is the human factor involved and the impact the construction of such a facility will have on Midwestern milk prices. It is estimated that Southeast (Georgia and Florida) consumers buy over twice as many milk products as produced by area farmers. Much of this milk comes from Upper Midwest and Midwestern dairy producers. Approximately 100 loads per week averaging 45,000 pounds comes from the neighboring state milk cooperatives based in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Once construction of the 10,000-cow dairies and $5 million milk processing plant is completed, many independent milk producers are concerned about milk markets and prices.

NFO Dairy Department Director Al Scott said this concern may be well placed since the new operation will be interrupting the normal flow of milk from Minnesota and Wisconsin into the southern markets. "Anytime you have a large corporation that comes in and has, basically, a takeover of an area, the effects are widespread. Ordinarily, Wisconsin and Minnesota have been a prime supply of milk for all southern regions. Here you have an operation that is being set up with its own cows, its own herd that intends to develop its own supply – this is going to keep that supply of milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin where the only thing they can do with it is put it into butter, powder or cheese. This interruption in the normal flow, I think, will have a detrimental effect on the complete Midwest," he said.

Scott added, however, that many foreign companies had constructed large cheese plants in the United States which were unsuccessful. These plants, he said, were largely unsuccessful because their technology was not such that they could produce products satisfactorily for this country. "Masstock is going to end up developing this technology and whether it will be good or bad, no one knows," the director commented. "But it will have a tendency to put the mom and pop cheese plants in Wisconsin out of business. They can't compete with the large corporation-type facilites that these people are bringing in."

Masstock International, a company with dairy farms in Ireland, Saudi Arabia, England and China, plans to begin construction of its first dairy in April or May. The dairy will utilize intensive drylot units with milking parlors and no grazing. The company will market milk through a cooperative until its processing plant is constructed.

Host families sought for exchange students

Qualified host families are now being sought for World Exchange international exchange students. These students will spend four weeks this summer experiencing the United States with an American family while participating in their daily life.

World Exchange, a non-profit organization, is searching for American families excited by the prospect of sharing their homes with a European exchange student.

Host families provide room and board for the student and offer him or her the same guidance and love they give to their own children.

By sharing their daily life with a student from another country, the family members will have a unique opportunity to learn about another culture through another person's eyes, while deepening their appreciation of their own country by introducing America to some one new.

Families interested in participating in this program can receive more information by contacting their local program director; Loreley N. Bitner, 1935 Split Rock Rd., Lancaster, Pa. 17601, Tel. 717/569-4664.

Public wants to preserve ag land, Delaware poll finds

DOVER, DE — The Delaware Department of Agriculture released the results of an opinion survey of adult Delawareans conducted by the University of Delaware indicating that 88% responding think that farmland loss is a serious problem in Delaware.

In other responses 75% supported a new north/south highway with minimal impacts on Delaware farmland while 86% disagreed with the concept of lowest cost roads regardless of the impacts on farmland.

"This shows that the public is squarely behind state projects only if they respect our best farmland," according to Agriculture Secretary, William B. Chandler, Jr., "The survey results show that the public supports the kind of cooperation we saw between agriculture and the Department of Transportation during the Route 13 route selection process."

In another question people were asked whether they would support the purchase of development rights from farmers in order to preserve farmland. Responses were split with 49% saying they would support such a program while 51% said they would not. Those polled were also asked how they thought such a program should be funded.

"We will be studying the results of this survey as we develop program proposals for farmland protection over the next few months," said Miachael McGrath, Manager of Agricultural Lands Preservation, who added, "One thing for sure, Delawareans recognize the problem of farmland loss and want to see positive steps taken to stem the loss."

The Delaware Household Survey is a scienfitic sample of all adult Delawareans that yields results accurate to ± 3%. The survey is directed by Robert A. Wilson of the College of Urban Affairs and Public Policy.

For further information about the survey call Michael McGrath at 736-4811 or 800-282-8685 (New Castle or Sussex Counties).

Butler named to promotion board

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng today named Carl Butler of Pine Plains, New York, to the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board.

Butler fills a vacancy created by the resignation of board member Leon Brown of Westown, New York. Butler's term of office expires April 30, 1987.

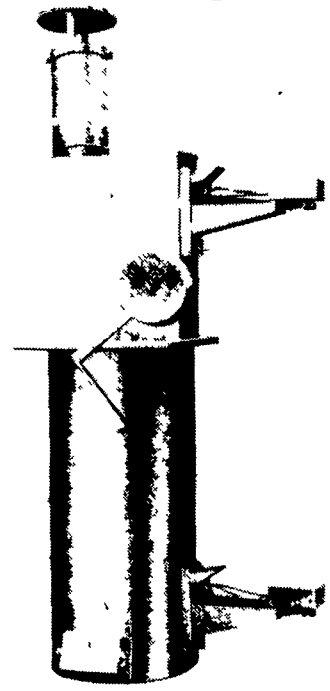
The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board was established by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education.

The board designs programs to strengthen the dairy industry's position in domestic and foreign markets. The national program is financed by a mandatory 15-cent per hundredweight assessment on all milk produced in the contiguous 48 states and marketed commercially by dairy farmers.

SHENANDOAH INCINERATORS - A SANITARY ALTERNATIVE FOR ON FARM DISPOSAL

To Help Prevent the Spread of Disease

The sanitary way to get rid of animal carcasses is with a Shenandoah incinerator. It's pollution controlled and convenient to use. It's also extra efficient because we've lined the burning chambers, and in some models even the afterburning chambers, with one and a quarter inches of refractory cement. That keeps the heat up and the energy costs down.



Choose among eight easy-to-install smoke and odor controlled models. You even have the option of burning gas or oil.

Ask your local Shenandoah dealer about efficient, inexpensive incinerators. You'll find out how our bright ideas in farm equipment can mean a bright spot in your day. And still leave a green spot in your wallet.

Woodland hits 'cheap' barley imports

CORNING, IA — National Farmers Organization President DeVon Woodland today blasted the import of cheap barley, which he said dealt another blow to financially strapped grain producers.

Woodland, in making the announcement, charged that Continental Grain Company's recent action to buy barley in New Zealand and ship it into the United States is a psychological tatic aimed at breaking already depressed domestic markets.

"This action continues a pattern by major grain companies to use imports to eliminate any opportunity grain producers may have to benefit from improved prices," Woodland emphasized. "It seems that major grain companies will stop at nothing to drive prices lower."

He called this action a "major blow" to American grain producers, who are already facing disastrous prices for grain, and pointed out that it is one of a continuing series of importing actions being taken by large agribusinesses without regard for U.S. farmers.

Woodland urged grain producers to demand an explanation from Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng on why these imports of feed grains are being allowed to come into this country when grain prices are already drastically below loan-clearing levels. Lyng, the farm leader pointed out, will be in Atlantic, Iowa, April 3 to talk with farm leaders.

This importing action came on top of other recent government tactics, such as Farm Bill amendments and untimely release of PIK grains, to drive grain prices downward, he added.

The NFO president urged producers to immediately use the all-commodity marketing agency in common developed by the National Farmers Organization to counteract these pressures and strategies used by buyers and the present marketing structure.

He said producers must, first, demand an explanation from local ASCS officials of the 50/92 option as it now stands following late-breaking amendments. Under eleventh-hour amendments, Woodland pointed out, most states still allow producers to use haying and grazing practices on 50 percent of permitted base acres while benefitting from a 92 percent deficiency payment.

"Even if producers have already signed up for the program," he said, "they should not consider their contract with the government final until local ASCS officials have thoroughly explained their options under the 50/92 provision."

Woodland also urged producers to immediately commit all PIK grain with the National Farmers Organization. This group action, he said, gives producers the best opportunity to counter the price-depressing affects of the release of PIK grain in May and importing actions.

Hog numbers down 3 percent

HARRISBURG — Inventory of all hogs and pigs on March 1, 1986, in the 10 states conducting quarterly hog surveys is estimated at 38.6 million head, three percent below last March 1, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This is four percent below March 1, 1984 and the lowest March 1 inventory since 1976. The 10 quarterly states are Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina and Ohio.

Breeding inventory, at 4.99 million head, is four percent less than last year and eight percent less than March 1, 1984. This is the lowest March 1 breeding herd inventory since 1973, when estimates for these comparable 10 states became available. Market hog inventory, at 33.6 million head, is two percent below a year earlier, three percent below two years ago and the lowest March 1 market hog inventory since 1977.

The December 1985-February 1986 pig crop was 14.9 million head, one percent above the corresponding period last year and four percent above two years ago. There were 1.94 million sows that farrowed during the quarter, a decrease of one percent from the comparable quarter both last year and two years ago.

Sows farrowings averaged 7.67 pigs per litter compared with 7.51 last year and 7.27 two years ago. The litter rate is the highest of record for a December-February quarter.

Hog producers in the 10 quarterly states intend to have 2.32 million sows farrow during March-May of this year. If these intentions are realized, farrowings would total four percent less than the actual number for the comparable period of 1985 and six percent less than the 1984 quarter. Farrowing intentions for June-August are 2.18 million head, slightly below actual farrowings for the same period last year and three percent less than two years ago.

Rabbit meeting set for June

UNIVERSITY PARK — Rabbits will outnumber people in Pennsylvania by the year 2000, if the present trend continues. Approximately one million young rabbits are being produced annually in Pennsylvania by 24,000 commercial breeders. In 1970, only 50,000 rabbits were produced by 2000 breeders.

The rabbit has been in demand as a pet, a show animal, a laboratory model, and as a source of meat and pelts. How to Provide for Better Health for Rabbits through Management is the theme of the 1986 Rabbit Conference to be held June 13 and 14, 1986 at University Park, Pa.

To obtain a program and additional information on the conference, write to: Rabbit Conference, Short Course Office, 306 Ag. Administration Building, University Park, Pa. 16802. All rabbit breeders are welcome.

Seven Hundred attend Bucks-Lehigh credit meeting

700 member/stockholders and guests attended the 1986 stockholders' meeting of the Berks-Lehigh Valley Farm Credit Associations on Friday, April 4, 1986 in Allentown.

Bernard C. Flory, President, reported that, despite the present stressful situation in agriculture, the Berks-Lehigh Valley Associations remain financially sound. The members maintained a 96% current status on loans during 1985 — remaining above the districts performance standards. As of February 28, 1986, the combined loan volume of the Berks-Lehigh Valley Federal Land Bank Association (FLBA) and Production Credit Association (PCA) was over $96 million. The association serves 1838 members in Berks, Schuylkill, Northampton, Monroe, Carbon, and Pike Counties.

Flory further stated that the problems of the nationwide farm credit system, of which Berks-Lehigh Valley Farm Credit Service is a part, have affected the local association, indirectly, by increasing the cost of money, thus causing the interest rates to remain a present levels. He did say, however, that several new programs were made available this week to combat the high interest rates.

Robert Leiby, Lehigh County Extension Director, served as the election chairman and announced the following winning candidates: elected to serve 3-year terms: on the FLBA Board of Directors; Charles L. Diehl, Bangor and Ernest O. Miller, Hamburg; on the PCA Board of Directors; Ellis R. Kunkel, Kempton.

The 1987 nominating committee members who were elected are: FLBA; Raymond L. Kulp, Kutztown; Diana M. Wessner, Germansville and John K. Shafer, Tamaqua; to the PCA committee; Joshua M. Grim, Breinigsville; E. Daniel Leatherman, Hamburg, and Ralph W. Zettlemoyer, Fogelsville.

Farm credit is a nationwide credit co-operative which lends money to farmers, farm-related business owners, acquatic producers, and rural home owners. The local Berks-Lehigh Valley Association is part of the Baltimore District, one of 12 districts throughout the United States and Puerto Rico.

Horse, mule show slated

MT. AIRY, MD – The Maryland Draft Horse and Mule Association will sponsor an Open Driving Schooling Show for draft horses, pleasure horses, mules and ponies on Sunday, May 4, 1986. Ribbons will be awarded in numerous hitch classes (only) that will be designed for maximum satisfaction of both novice and experienced drivers, no matter what type of equine animal is hitched.

The object of the "show" is basically a fun-type day, where experienced teamsters can share knowledge and knowhow with those who might not have the fancy horses and equipment, nor the inclination to tackle major events.

To this end, the class organization is considerably less formal than that used at the major structured shows, with judging standards reflecting an emphasis on driver/animal effectiveness.

Many experienced drivers and teamsters will be on hand to assist, and it is planned to have the judges explain their grading results as they are made for all those interested.

Hitch classes will be included for novice animals, novice drivers, singles, teams, multiple hitches, two and four wheeled drawn vehicles, "drive then ride", and an obstacle course. Some of the more informal classes will be open for light and heavy animals, while the more traditional cart and wagon classes may be divided by type, according to demand that day.

Mt. Airy, MD is located about 12 miles east of Frederick MD and 25 miles west of Baltimore immediately adjacent to Interstate Route 70. Access to the Mt. Airy Volunteer Fire Co. fairgrounds is convenient and direct from the interstate.

Lunch will be available on the grounds; but in any case there is fast food within walking distance. For more information on classes and directions, write to: MDHMA; 8830 Dollyhyde Rd., Union Bridge, MD 21791. Telephone numbers: Days (301) 829-0333 or 831-5777; evenings (301) 898-9654.

Volunteer daughter tops Maryland state Jersey Sale

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

KEYMAR, MD — The Maryland Jersey Cattle Club had its largest State Sale here last Saturday. It was by Mr. & Mrs. Edward Kahler at their Gaywinds Farm.

The accent of this sale was on youth; from the age to the consignments, to the number of animals purchased as project heifers, to the donation of sale proceeds by two consignors to the Maryland 4-H Dairy Foundation Fund.

The sale averaged $550 on 61 head. This strong average was attained on 13 animals that were over the age of summer yearlings and of those 13, only six were milking.

A fancy senior calf, Silver Maple Volunteer Dinah, topped the sale at $1850.00. She sold to junior member Chris Stonesifer, Unionville, MD. This September daughter of Mayfield Volunteer, out of a production plus dam, was consigned by R. Wilford Runkle, Monrovia, MD. Though the dam was lost a calving, the maternal granddam boasted records over 14,000 pounds of milk and had three records over 700 pounds of fat.

Second high selling animals was S. V. Production Dorothy. Consigned by Scott S. Stanford, Gaithersburg, MD, she sold for $1150 to Spring Valley Jerseys, John Stiles & Sons, Westminster, MD. This VG 85 four year old sold fresh, having jsut completed a 2-11 365 day record of 17,050 pounds of milk and 720 pounds of fat.

Two consignors chose to benefit the Maryland 4-H Dairy Foundation Fund which supports the activities of the dairy clubs and specifically the Maryland 4-H Dairy Cattle Judging Team. Windy Knoll Jerseys, Rockville, MD donated the entire selling price of $975 from their VG 82, fresh 3 year old consignment. A Fair Weather Goldminer grand-daughter out of a VG 83 point W. F. Secret Javelin dam, this fancy uddered young cow was purchased by G. Kaye Staley, Unionville, MD.

Waverly Farms, Clearbrook, VA donated half of the proceeds of their consignment, W. F. Joys County Ideal, to the fund. This senior calf by Joys Count sold for $500.

This year's sale committee included: Wayne Stiles, Chairman, Hansen Hoffman, Carol Kahler, Jim Stonesifer, Wilford Runkles, Wayne Fender, and Marge Walls. Robert Mullendore served as auctioneer and Mike Heath read pedigrees. Maryland Jersey Queen Susan Stonesifer was on hand to run the slips.

Bank Names Barley and Funk to Advise

HARRISBURG, PA — The appointments of John E. Barley of Conestoga and Amos H. Funk of Millersville to the Lancaster Center Advisory Board of Commonwealth National Bank have been announced by Larry Zielinski, senior vice president and manager of the bank's Lancaster Region.

Barley is the representative in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives from the 100th legislative district and is a partner in the Star Rock Dairy Farm in Manor Township, Lancaster County. In the House of Representatives, Barley is serving on the House Conservation Committee and the House Local Government Committee.

He is a regional director for the Pennsylvania Agricultural Republicans and is a member of the board of trustees of the Evangelical School of Theology. He is a past chairman of the Manor Township Planning Commission and is a former member of the following groups: Pennsylvania Agricultural Lands Condemnation Approval Board, Lancaster County Solid Waste Advisory Committee, Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry board of directors and executive committee, Lancaster County Farmers Association's political education committee, and Millersville Jaycees.

In 1979, Barley was recognized by the U.S. Jaycees as one of four Outstanding Young Farmers in America and received the Master Farmer Award from the Pennsylvania Agricultural Extension Service in 1978.

Barley and his wife, the former Jane Reeder, reside in Manor Township. They have four children.

Funk is associated with his son in growing and retailing fruits and vegetables at Funk's Farm, where he was born, in Millersville.

Funk is a past president of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, Pennsylvania Soil and Water Conservation District Directors, Inc., Conestoga Valley Watershed Association, Pennsylvania State University Agricultural Advisory Council, and is past chairman of the Lancaster County Soil and Water Conservation District. He was appointed to the Lancaster County Agricultural Preservation Board in 1980 and is currently serving as its chairman. He has served on the Pennsylvania Soil and Water Conservation Commission under three governors and was reappointed by Governor Thornburgh in 1985 for a four-year term.

In 1984, Funk received the N.A.C.D. Special Service Award from the National Association of Conservation Districts in recognition of his 30 years of leadership at the local, state, and national levels. In 1985, he received the Pennsylvania Farmers Association's Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award. In 1966, he received the Master Farmer Award.

Funk and his wife Esta reside in Millersville.

Forest Activity Packet Available

The Pennsylvania Forestry Association wants you to help them celebrate 100 years. The statewide celebration called "the Year of the Forest" wants individuals and/or organizations to promote our woodlands. The monthly theme for April, "Arbor Day and the Urban Forest" celebrates the planting of trees in urban areas.

One way to join in the celebration is to order a Year of the Forest activity packet. Each packet contains a calendar of special events, two 4-year old hemlock tree seedlings (12"-14" tall, ready for planting), a Year of the Forest bumper sticker, and an artistic reproduction of the 1931 proclamation of the hemlock as Pennsylvania's state tree. Send $6.30 for each packet ordered to Year of the Forest, c/o Strathmore Forests, R.D. 1, Box 247, Zeigler Road, Dover, PA 17315. All packets will be shipped by UPS from April 14 through April 25, 1986 . . . just in time for spring planting. Order now — a limited supply is available.

Farm Credit presents operating results and plows

DENVER, CO – "The Farm Credit System demonstrated in 1985 that it is not only willing but capable of making the changes necessary to serve American agriculture in the trying years ahead," said Grant Lucas, chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation of America. Lucas made the statement in opening remarks to Farm Credit district directors and bank presidents attending the first annual stockholders meeting of the Farm Credit Corporation of America this week in Denver.

"We're faced with the most challenging time in the history of the Farm Credit System," says Lucas. "We can no longer get by as we have in the past as a federation of loosely affiliated credit institutions."

Lucas explained that the system today is viewed by Congress, media and the investors who purchase system securities as a single, nationwide system. To survive, system institutions have had to recognize their interdependence and act as one, he added. "That's why the Farm Credit Corporation of America was established," Lucas noted, "to provide national leadership in dealing with critical system issues and policies."

H. Brent Beesley, FCCA president and chief executive officer, told district leaders that "the answers to how we work our way out of these troubled times lies within the system. It's our job at FCCA to draw these answers out, share them with the system and provide the leadership necessary to implement them."

"However," Beesley cautioned, "we're facing systemwide problems and the solutions require a systemwide effort. The Farm Credit Corporation of America and the Farm Credit bank presidents are already working together as a team to find the solutions."

During the meeting, FCCA division managers presented a series of year-end reports. J. M. Davis, executive vice president and manager of the Farmbank Division, reported that the Farmbank Division saved system banks and associations an estimated $7.2 million dollars in 1985. These savings were achieved in the areas of insurance, joint purchasing, research, training, communications and financial and administrative services. These savings represent the difference between what system organizations would have had to spend for similar services purchased on an individual basis outside the system.

James M. Schurr, senior vice president and manager of the Credit Standards Division, reported that the credit and review standards developed by his staff are intended to minimize each bank's potential exposure to loss.

"National credit and review standards control credit risk by establishing verifiable performance standards for the major credit and review functions," said Schurr.

In 1986, the Credit Standards Division will develop and test reporting and monitoring systems for the credit and review standards. Schurr noted that banks that do not meet system standards, will be asked to develop action plans which will bring them into compliance.

"We know that with today's economic environment, this will be a difficult task that may take a year, or three, or even five," said Schurr. "We intend to work closely with the districts and their officers in arriving at realistic and attainable levels of progress," he added.

Schurr also reported that FCCA will be developing new approaches in areas such as pricing, competition, market intelligence and new products and services. "One of our highest priorities," Schurr said, "is to be competitive in the marketplace with our interest rates."

William A. BeSore, senior vice president and manager of the Financial Standards Division, told stockholders that the Financial Standards Division has broader responsibilities than just financial standards. BeSore cited his division's support of The Farm Credit Council Legislative Committee in developing financial projections and analysis in connection with the system's efforts to secure passage of the Farm Credit Amendments Act of 1985.

During 1986, BeSore reported, the Financial Standards Division will concentrate on several important issues and projects. These include the gathering, consolidating and analysis of systemwide financial information; working with other FCCA divisions to implement a common general ledger software package for the system; and responding to the new capital sufficiency regulations being developed by the Farm Credit Administration.

Continuous and improved financial forecasting is an essential management tool for restoring profitability to the Farm Credit System, noted BeSore. "We will be heavily involved in this area in 1986 and will be working closely with districts to enhance our computer models," he added.

Robert E. Sweeney, vice president and manager of the Electronic Data Processing Standards Division, reported that the primary objective of the EDP Standards Division is to increase the value and function of the system's internal communications and data processing resources.

"Development of information processing and reporting standards will give system institutions a stable and compatible platform and communications network from which to build more efficient and effective methods of delivery for credit and other services to borrowers," said Sweeney.

The design specifications for these standards will be developed in 1986 and 1987, Sweeney said.

Bourbon Springs to host 5th Spring Sale

NEWVILLE — Junior livestock exhibitors interested in finishing a prize-winning project lamb or pig for the coming show season may want to visit Cumberland County's Newville Fairgrounds on April 26.

The occasion is Bourbon Springs Farm's fifth Spring Sale, which will include guest consignors Lemmon Farm of Newburg and Shepherd's Crook of Mechanicsburg.

In addition to project animals, the sale will feature 25 bred gilts, 15 service-age boars and 20 open gilts.

Ken and Joann Ketterer of Bourbon Springs Farm with the sire of the high indexing pen of boars at 1985 Delaware Boar Test. His progeny will sell in Bourbon Spring's sale on April 26.

Attracting buyers from several Pennsylvania counties, as well as Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and New York, the Bourbon Springs sale has produced champions for many exhibitors on the local and county levels.

Something special this year, reports Bourbon Springs owners, Ken and Joann Ketterer, will be the sale of progeny of three Duroc boars that had sired high indexing pens of boars in three state boar tests last year. Bourbon Springs has been involved in the Meat Animal Evaluation Center boar test at State College since 1974.

Another Pennsylvania boar test regular is Lemmon Farm, owned by Bruce Lemmon and Bruce, Jr.. Last year Lemmon Farms had the top indexing pen of boars on test, and set new records for individual boar index (171) and loin eye area (7 square inches).

Shepherd's Crook owner Robert Leib is well known in sheep show circles for producing show winners. Shepherd's Crook has produced many market and purebred champions, including the 1984 Cumberland County FFA market champion.

Auctioneered by Art Kling, the sale is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on April 26 at the Newville Fairgrounds, located on Route 533 west of Newville.

Fencing bulletin published

NEWARK, DE — Good fencing is an important part of horse management. Horses can break out of weak fences, injuring or scarring themselves in the process. Fencing should be strong, safe, durable and attractive.

The Delaware Cooperative Extension Service has published a bulletin which discusses the types and construction of horse fences. The 28-page booklet includes chapters on planning and selecting fences, as well as detailed instructions for laying out fence lines and constructing post and rail, wire mesh, and board fences. Also included are directions for building both floodgates and standard gates.

The bulletin is available for $2 (payable to the University of Delaware) from the Extension Agricultural Engineer, Plan Service, 058 Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303. Specify bulletin 136, "Fencing For Horses."

Delaware residents can purchase the bulletin from county extension offices in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) and Georgetown (856-7303).

Nominate your top dairy individual

World Dairy Expo is seeking nominations of outstanding persons to be cited for their contributions to the dairy industry. The individuals selected will be honored at a Recognition Reception and Banquet scheduled for Tuesday, September 30th on the grounds of the Dane County Exposition Center, Madison, Wisconsin.

For awards will again be presented.

One award is presented to the Man of the Year, who must be an active dairy farmer whose main source of income is derived from the farm; the second to the Industry Person of the Year, who must be a salaried person paid by industry.

The third award goes to the National Dairy Woman. She must be an active partner in the farm operation, with her selection based on cosntributions to the farm, family and community.

The fourth award category is International Person of the Year. Qualified individuals include dairy farmers or representatives of dairy industry from any country other than the United States who have contributed to dairy farming or the dairy industryon an international level. Select Sires, Inc. and Harding & Harding, Inc. provide the award plaques signed by the President of the United States for each of the recipients. In addition, .the National Dairy Woman receives a trip for herself and her husband to World Dairy Expo.

The National Dairy Woman program is sponsored annually by Associated Milk Producers, Inc., Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., Golden Guernsey Dairy Cooperative and The Swiss Valley Farm Dairymen.

Recognized in 1985 were EUGENE NELSON, Union Grove, Wisconsin, THOMAS L. LYON, Shawano, Wisconsin and DORIS HETTS, Ft. Atkinson, Wisconsin. All are active on state and national levels in promoting the dairy industry. DR. MARIA STOLZMAN, Warsaw, Poland was honored as the International Person of the Year.

Nominations for the 1986 awards must be postmarked by May 31, 1986. In order for the nominations to be accepted, they must be submitted on an official form which may be obtained by contacting World Dairy Expo at 2135 Rimrock Road, Madison, Wisconsin 53713, or by calling 608/251-3976.

World Dairy Expo is an international trade show for dairy farmers attracting nearly 90,000 visitors from across the United States and from as many as 54 countries. The show features national dairy cattle shows and judging contests, a Craft Forum, educational speakers and an extensive display of dairy equipment and technology by hundreds of local and national manufacturers. The 1986 show is scheduled for October 1 through 5 at the Dane County Exposition Center in Madison, Wisconsin.

"I believe Silo Guard II is partially responsible for this milk income increase due to the fact we've made no changes in our feeding program other than treating our haylage this past year with Silo Guard II.

I began noticing the untreated haylage was 'carmelizing' along with loosing excessive amounts of water. Treatment of the haylage with Silo Guard II eliminated this problem totally. The fed-out haylage now has a fresh, green appearance with a pleasant aroma. Our herd, 200 of which we're milking respond to the treated haylage very well, eagerly clean it up with no hesitation. I feel that the improved silage diet along with closer attention to milking and feeding programs have made the difference. I'm planning to treat other silages this year with Silo Guard II and strongly recommend it to other dairy farmers . . . it sure makes a profitable difference for me," says Jim.

For complete information on maintaining a higher quality silage and increasing your profits . . . contact one of our Silo Guard II Reps. or call us toll-free.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Rough ride ahead

Now that the bids are out for the whole herd buyout program, it looks like a part of the surplus milk problem will be taken care of. At least temporarily. Shakespeare would say, "Ay, there's the rub." How long will it last?

For every one of us left in the business of milking cows, a major question must be faced. That one is, "How am I going to act now that some of my competition is out of business"?

Whether you think of your neighbors as competitors or just hard working dairymen like yourself, all people who milk cows are competing with each other for a limited market. Now that some of that competition is temporarily gone, how am I going to handle it?

Eliminating a million cows from the herd will cause a small gap in production — for a while. But the potential for quickly filling that gap is still here, and most of us know how it can be done. We can assume that a lot of the lower producers are among the herds that sold out. But there are many 20,000 pound herds and 25,000 pound cows still around.

We will be lifting the average production per cow to new heights before we know it. It is simply a matter of fine-tuning the technology that we already have.

Feed programming, growth hormones, and nutritional additives are only starters. How long will it be until we are right back in the same old surplus battle?

The answer lies in how each one of us is going to react in the next couple of years. Some will immediately start to build larger numbers, perhaps in preparation for a possible quota system.

It could develop into a mad rush to buy up the available cows, just to keep someone else from getting them. The biggest influence on your reaction as well as your neighbors is, how profitable will it be to expand, and will the means (money and cows), be available when they are needed?

The support price for milk will be the final criteria for both staying in business and deciding to expand. Solvency must be the key to survival.

The natural tendency whenever a shortage develops is for those who are in a position to expand to do so as quickly as possible. If shortages develop, they will be regional, and not countrywide.

Milk distributors, both Co-op's and private companies, will continue to compete for both supplies and markets. This will put pressure on you as a producer to get into the best position you can find for the long haul. Shaky and marginal processors will be brushed aside, and the rest will fight for position in the market place.

In spite of Regional Federal Marketing orders that control prices, there will have to be a sifting out and re-shuffeling of supplies and distributors. How fast this occurs will be interesting to watch.

I don't expect any fast knee-jerk reaction to the Dairy Herd Reduction plan. Most of us will be rather conservative and cautious over the next couple of years.

Those of us who intend to stay in business will keep our eyes open, and stay informed on all political issues, as well as those issues that affect our business directly.

We will make the necessary adjustments to our farm management, and keep a clear, clean path open between the farm and the bank.

Heavy debts will have to be made manageable and kept that way.

There will be no room for the casual, sloppy, or uninformed and untrained dairyman.

Farmers have always thrived on competition and uncertainty. A little belt tightening now might slim us down for the hurdles that lie ahead.

Order No. 4 Class I May milk price set

ALEXANDRIA, VA — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D.. Shine today announced a Class I milk price of $14.05 per hundredweight for May 1986. This price is up 23 cents from April but is 68 cents below last May's Class I price. Effective with the May 1986 Class I price, the Order 4 Class I differential increased from $2.78 to $3.03 per hundredweight pursuant to the Food Security Act of 1985 and the subsequent expedited final decision.

Mr. Shine announced a Class II milk price of $10.99 per hundredweight for March 1986 and a butterfat differential of 15.8 cents for the month. The Class II price was down nine cents from the previous month, while the butterfat differential decreased two-tenths of a cent.

The May 1986 Class I price and the March 1986 Class II price are based on the March 1986 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $11.02 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for March was $1.3748 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.8044 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

Brazil buys dairy products

WASHINGTON — Under Secretary of Agriculture Daniel G. Amstutz announced an export sale by the Commodity Credit Corporation of 22.0 million pounds (10,000 metric tons) of nonfat dry milk valued at $6.9 million to Interbras, a Brazilian buyer.

CCC sold the nonfat dry milk, part of its surplus inventory acquired under the CCC dairy price support program, for $690 per ton f.a.s. (free along side) vessel. Deliveries will be made in April and May with payment in U.S. dollars. No credit arrangements are involved in this sale, Amstutz said.

Brazil has also purchased 7,000 tons of nonfat dry milk from New Zealand at $690 per ton and 5,000 tons of nonfat dry milk from European exporters at $690 per ton.

MUNCY-CHIEF SX777

Congratulations to Joe Sump and son Terry, Stump Acres Farms, York, Pa. Produced 220.9 bushels from the picker sheller Muncy-Chief SX777 to Win National Champion and $250.00 Cash Prize and Muncy-Chief Trophy.

220.9 Bushel Shelled Corn Per Acre

#1 QUALITY #1 YIELD #1 POPULARITY FOR GRAIN AND SILAGE IN THE NORTHEAST AND MID WEST

MUNCY-CHIEF SX777 SINGLE CROSS

Muncy-Chief SX777 holds National Record in 1977 of 265 Bu. per acre and in 1976 of 251 Bu. per acre checked by Vocational Agricutural teachers in New York and Pennsylvania, and again in West-Virginia, 258 Bu. in 1980. Muncy-Chief SX777 has always been a corn hard to beat. Muncy-Chief SX777 differs in that the male or pollen parent contributes a thicker ear, more yield and thicker planting from 1,000 to 2,000 plants per acre than many hybrids of similar maturity.

Muncy-Chief SX777 carries its ears well and has an excellent stalk and root system. Recommended from Pa. to Ga. and the Mid West for grain and silage. It has a good portion of TDN, Matures for silo in 100 days, 110 to 115 days for grain.

In the 1980's - 1980, 258 Bu. Acre; 1981 - 217; 1982 - 246; 1983 - 272; 1984 - 244; Joe Stump record 1985 - 220.9; Order the Best - Some or a few bushels of Muncy-Chief Hybrids.

Promotion funds to continue

NEW YORK — A plan whereby dairy farmers contribute money for milk promotion activities of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., headquartered in Syracuse, New York, was approved today for another year by Thomas A. Wilson, Market Administrator, New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area. These milk promotion activities include advertising, nutrition education, publicity for dairy products, marketing and product research, and informational services.

This year the deduction under the "positive letter" will again be applied as a credit against the 15 cents per hundredweight dairy promotion deduction required by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983. Up to 10 cents designated by producers for an approved local promotion programs such as that of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is eligible as an offset to this mandatory 15-cent deduction.

Mr. Wilson said that today's action allows handlers regulated by the marketing orders to send "positive letters" to their dairy-farmer suppliers. A dairy farmer who receives a letter will be considered to approve, for one year, deductions of 10 cents per hundredweight from his monthly milk checks, unless he notifies his handler in writing that no deduction should be made.

Moneys deducted from payments for milk delivered on or after May 1, 1986 will be paid directly by the handler to the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., Syracuse, New York.

The Market Administrator explained that participation in the local program is voluntary for both handlers and producers, and a participating producer may have deductions stopped at any time by notifying the handler. A producer who receives no letter need not contact his handler since no deduction will be made for the local program.

In approving the plan for the coming year, Mr. Wilson pointed out that there has been no substantial opposition to the use of the positive letter procedure by producers.

Use of the positive letter approach was requested by Dairylea Cooperative Inc., and Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc.

Ayrshires to hold national convention in Pennsylvania

GRANTVILLE — The second national breed convention in as many weeks will be held in Pennsylvania when the Ayrshire enthusiasts meet on April 22 to the 25. They will assemble at the Holiday Inn in Grantville for the 111th National Annual Meeting and Sale.

The first three days feature farm visits, tours of nearby attractions, the annual meeting and awards banquet, and the youth program.

Day one finds the group traveling to Masonic Homes Farm and Sycamore Meade Farm, two well respected Ayrshire breeders in the south central portion of the state.

Masonic Homes Farm has been a registered Ayrshire breeder since its beginnings in 1913. They presently milk 120 cows and maintain a 14,000 pound plus herd average.

They are located in the rolling hills outside of Elizabethtown, Lancaster County where they farm over 1,000 acres. In addition to their quality Ayrshires, Masonic Homes also raises beef, swine, poultry, orchards, general farm crops and vegetables. Much of the production of these enterprises is consumed by the 700 guests at the Homes.

From here they will travel to Millersburg and the home of Sycamore Meade Farm and their show champion Ayrshires. This farm is operated as a partnership by Earl Keefer and his daughter and son-in-law, Sandra and Donald Shetterly.

Sycamore Meade is home to approximately 150 head of Ayrshires. They have leased or sold six bulls over the years to various A.I. organizations. They have receive six Constructive Breeders awards and numerous 150,000 production certificates.

They will then proceed to visit an Amish Farm and dine at Camp Hebron. The evening will feature a slide presentation by Eshelman Studios.

The tour takes an easterly direction for day two as they travel down to Elverson to visit Conebella Farm and Villanova, home of Ardrossan Ayrshires.

Conebella Farm founded in 1922 is operated today by Charles Gable and his son, Donald. All of the 130 Ayrshires on the farm are descendents of the original heifers bought in 1930 from the Dunwoody Home Farm.

In 1984 Conebella Farm received it's 27th consecutive Constructive Breeder Award. Presently they have 10 excellent animals with the highest being Conebella Ora Renee '94'.

Also on Wednesday is a trip to Ardrossan Farm. This Ayrshire herd is managed by Mrs. Edgar Scott daughter of the founder Colonel Robert L. Montgomery. This herd was built from nine animals imported from Scotland in 1910.

The February DHIA report showed the herd average on 101 cows to be 19,346 pounds of milk and 801 pounds of fat. Ardrossan is home to three cows that have produced over 200,000 pounds of milk and six cows that have records over 20,000 pounds of milk.

The group will feast on a meal at Good and Plenty Restaurant in the evening after the farm tours on April 23.

This evening will be highlighted by the Dairy Bowl Finals for the youths.

Thurday's activities start bright and early with the youth breakfast at 6:30 a.m. followed by the youth award program. The Annual Meeting starts at 9:00 a.m. and continues into the afternoon.

The youths will be busy touring Hershey's Chocolate World during the morning hours. In the afternoon they will stage a Mock Auction using the animals slated to sell in the National Sale on Friday.

Doug Dodds will serve as emcee for the annual awards banquet on the evening of Thursday, April 24. The featured speaker will be Dieter Krieg from Farmshine newspaper.

Friday features the Grand National Sale at high noon in the Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg. This sale has 45 animals catalogued from across the country.

This sale features quality Ayrshires that were selected for production, test, type and longevity. Nine young cows whose dam's have records over 21,000 pounds of milk and a 4.3 percent test will be sold. Also 23 bred heifers, six open heifers, and seven heifer calves with similar credentials will be sold.

The pedigrees of these animals show many lifetime records of over 100,000 pounds of milk and classifications of excellent or very good.

This sale also feature two donations from Ardrossan Farms to benefit the youth program. Ardrossan Just FMEC, a senior yearling, will be sold in the sale and the proceeds donated to the Youth Fund.

Ardrossan J Boy Endevering, a senior heifer, will be raffled off to support the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Youth. Anyone wishing to support this raffle can purchase tickets, $1.00 each or six for $5.00, at the convention or by sending the necessary funds to Barb Rader, Youth Chairman, Box 216, Connoquenessing, PA, 16027.

Centerville Elementary students learn about ag through art show

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

CENTERVILLE — Although Lancaster County is considered the Garden Spot of the nation because of its outstanding agriculture, a whole generation of students grow up with little or no concept of what it means to be a farmer or to live on a farm. Betty Lou Kauffman, art teacher at Centerville Elementary School in the Hempfield School District, took a giant step in educating the 500 suburban students there when she devoted her spring art show to "Art and Artists in Agriculture."

Even people closely connected with agriculture probably are not aware of the many well-known artists who have rural themes for their art. For inspiration and education, Betty Lou used actual artists for each of the projects she had students create.

The annual art show is held in conjunction with the spring musical and both share a common theme. This year National Agriculture Day coincided with the events, and the result was a massive educational thrust in understanding the agricultural heritage of Lancaster County. And it was not just students who learned; the many visitors to the musical who filled the halls enjoying the art displays also learned about "art in agriculture."

Betty Lou was a natural for promoting this agricultural theme since her husband, Abe, has a farrowing to nursery operation with 30 sows. Betty Lou said, "Living on a farm gave me the impetus, and I had a lot of influence from my husband." She added that she felt these suburban children may have needed the exposure to farming more than others, stating, "They didn't understand about farming and I didn't like some of the comments I heard.

The result of the six-week preparation process for the art show was a much deeper appreciation of farming. "They gained a lot of understanding about what farmers are doing in the fields. Most didn't understand about confinement of hogs and chickens," she pointed out.

One of the sixth graders' projects was doing pencil drawings of tractors. To provide actual pictures, Betty Lou picked up many brochures at Ag Progress Days last August. In addition to being awed by the tremendous size of the tractors, students got a lesson in economics, since many brochures featured the price. Betty Lou notes, "They could relate it to the price of a car."

To sweeten the interest in the drawing project, Lancaster Ford Tractor donated a model Fordson as a prize. They will also use the display at their store when it is taken down at Centerville later this month. Sixth graders chose from a wide variety of brands and models, and the results are impressive.

In another project, children created farm scenes with crayon animal profiles. For this, Betty Lou described to the children the many buildings found on a farm, and they drew these on their horizons. She commented, "Many children thought there were only barns on a farm. I told them about silos, grain bins, equipment sheds and other buildings."

As part of her graduate work, Betty Lou took a course in architecture and for a final project did a slide program on Lancaster County Germanic barns. This helped children see the variety of barns and understand how they are built.

Weathervanes offered another look at agriculture, and they were inspired by an actual weathervane given to Betty Lou's husband. The weathervanes were created from 35 gauge copper, brass and aluminum foil, and were put on dowels in half pint milk cartons. They are held in place with beads so that they can turn.

At each of the exhibit areas, Betty Lou has used the art of famous artists, and described how agriculture influenced their paintings. It is an education just to learn how Grandma Moses painted sky and ground first, adding as many people and animals as she needed "to fill the picture and make it interesting." Even Marc Chagall, the modern Russian artist, is represented with a painting he did which reminisces about his home on the farm, showing him milking a cow.

Centerville Elementary art teacher Betty Lou Kauffman shows off the pig puppet which became a favorite of the students as they worked with the art in agriculture project. Mrs. Kauffman stands in front of the display which shows the relationship between art and agriculture, and points out that Lancaster County is the Garden Spot of the nation.

One of the most famous paintings on display is Jamie Wyeth's "Pig," and the texture with which he depicted the pig led to yarn pictures by the children giving animals a soft touch. Betty Lou said the children also learned that not all pigs are pink, a lesson in itself which was enhanced with the use of a brown pig puppet which Betty Lou brought from home. "We have mostly Durocs," she said, "so that's why I have this pig."

Yet another area describes the work of Byzantine craftsmen who created mosaic pictures on floors and walls of palaces and temples using gemstones and tiles. This inspired Betty Lou to have the artists create mosaics of farm animals using seeds, another important agricultural product.

Famous Lancaster County artist Charles Demuth received attention for the work he did with agricultural products from Central Market which he used for some of his famous still life paintings. Centerville artists created their own still lifes in watercolor with agricultural products.

American Gothic, the famous farmer and his wife, also inspired the young artists, and could be found in many of the different creations, from weathervanes to landscapes.

Betty Lou explained that every student created something in both two and three dimensions. There were several classes which did sculptures of animals using modeling clay. Some carved animals, and some created stuffed animals. Many of the "models" for animals came from brochures from breed associations, and many pigs came from her own extensive collection of pigs. Often the class read books to broaden their knowledge and understanding.

Elizabeth Cunningham, a sixth grader at Centerville Elementary, shows two of the wind chimes made by sixth grade students from ceramic clay. Every kind of farm animal was used as a model by the students.

The importance of conservation became a lesson for those who did farm scenes and landscapes as well as for those who created paper mache model farms. Betty Lou said, "I always talk about conservation."

The entire first floor of Centerville Elementary has become a giant promotion for agriculture, and when the projects eventually go home with the children, the educational process will go on.

Betty Lou was pleased with the response from the children, as well as the many nice comments from parents and other family members.

Elizabeth Cunningham, 12, a sixth grader, said that though she lives near a farm, "I didn't know how much equipment it takes." Furthermore, she adds, "My sister didn't know anything about farms, and she came home and said, 'Mrs. Kauffman is teaching us about farming.' She was very happy."

Gerry DiGiusto, 11, also in sixth grade, said he liked the art projects and he might like to live on a farm, but "only for a week or two. You have to get up earlier." Gerry especially liked doing the tractors, and he enjoyed looking at the small sculptures created by first graders.

One of the first graders, Claire Phillips, 6½, remembered visiting a dairy farm in kindergarten. She especially enjoyed creating oil crayon farmers and landscapes, and said, "I didn't know the colors of tractors." One thing that keeps her from wanting to live on a farm is "all the work."

Michael Dobslaw, 7, was also impressed by the amount of work done on farms. He said, "Farmers have to do a lot of work, and it takes a long time for them to go through the fields." He noted that he would enjoy owning a "special" tractor, one with air conditioning!

He commented cryptically on the show, "I like everything. Nothing's ugly. Everybody did a good job!"

Indeed, everybody did do a good job. "Art and artists in agriculture" not only gave the children inspiration for their artistic work, but also a deep understanding of agriculture which will last a lifetime.

Homestead Notes

First graders at Centerville Elementary School did oil crayon farmers and landscapes based on "American Gothic." Here Claire Phillips, left, and Michael Dobslaw, hold another project of theirs, sculptured ducklings and roosters.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

OLD FASHIONED PUDDINGS, THE MICRO WAY!

Pudding is surprisingly easy to make in a microwave. It never scorches on the bottom, you don't have to stir constantly, and cleaning up is a breeze.

Put your double boiler away for good! Any puddings you make in it will be much easier in your microwave.

A large 6 to 8 cup measuring cup is the best utensil for pudding in a microwave. The handle makes it easy to move in and out of the oven, you can measure the ingredients right in the bowl, and it's easy to clean up.

No change in the ingredients of conventional recipes is necessary for microwaving puddings. Use this "cooking pattern" for your favorite recipe.

Scratch Pudding Recipes

1. Combine dry ingredients in a 2-quart measure or bowl. Add about 1/2 the liquid called for and stir well to dissolve lumps. Stir in remaining liquid.

2. Estimate how long it will take your pudding to come to a boil, by the amount of liquid you have:

1 cup takes 2 1/2 to 3 minutes
2 cups take 5 to 6 minutes
3 cups take 8 to 9 minutes

3. Microwave on high, uncovered, for half the estimated time without stirring. Stir well.

4. Microwave on high, uncovered, until the pudding boils, stirring every minute. (Frequent stirring during the second half prevents lumps.)

5. Follow your recipe to determine how long to let the pudding boil. Stir, then pour in dishes and chill, etc.

If your busy schedule doesn't leave you time to cook scratch puddings, here's how to microwave pudding mixes, instead.

Pudding Mixes:

1. Combine 2-cups cold milk and a 3-ounce pudding mix in an 8-cup measure or 2-quart bowl. Stir well. Leave uncovered.

2. Microwave on high for 3 minutes. Stir well.

3. Microwave on high for 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 minutes longer, stirring after each minute, until mixture comes to a boil and thickens. Do not over cook, since some thickeners break down and become thin and watery if overcooked.

4. Pour into bowls and chill.

I won't argue with you if you say the best rice pudding is baked for hours in a slow oven. But if you haven't got hours, this microwave version is ready to eat in one hour, and is inexpensive and delicious.

Rice Pudding

4 cups milk
1/2 cup long grain white rice (not instant)
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons margarine
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup raisins, optional
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cinnamon sugar to sprinkle on top, optional

1. Combine rice, milk, butter, sugar and salt in a 2-quart casserole. Leaving uncovered, microwave on high for 9 to 10 minutes, stirring once, until steaming hot.

2. Stir, then reduce power and microwave on medium (50,5) for 30 minutes, until rice is tender.

3. Stir in raisins, if desired, and vanilla. Beat eggs well. Then, stirring rapidly, pour eggs slowly into hot rice and milk. Stir until well mixed.

4. Microwave on medium low (30,3 defrost) for 5 minutes, stir. Sprinkle top with cinnamon sugar if desired.

5. Microwave on medium low (30,3) for 10 minutes longer, without stirring, until pudding is thickened. Let cool 15 minutes before serving. Serve warm or cold; refrigerate leftovers. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Tip: To cut recipe in half, halve all ingredients and microwave for 5 to 6 minutes in Step 1 and 5 minutes in Step 5. Other microwave times remain the same. Serves 3 to 4.

Quick-cooking tapioca can be used in the microwave. Pearl tapioca takes too long to soften, and is best used on the range in conventional recipes. Be sure to let the pudding stand 5 to 10 minutes before cooking, or the tapioca will still be crunchy!

Tapioca Pudding

2 cups milk
3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
3 tablespoons sugar
1 large egg, separated
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons sugar

1. Combine milk, tapioca, 3 tablespoons sugar, egg yolk, and salt in an 8-cup measure or 2-quart bowl. Mix well and let stand 5 to 10 minutes for the tapioca to start softening.

2. Meanwhile, beat egg white until foamy. Gradually beat in 2 tablespoons sugar, beating to stiff peaks. Set aside.

3. Stir pudding, then microwave on high for 6 minutes. Stir.

4. Microwave on medium high (70,7) for 6 to 8 minutes longer until the pudding boils and thickens. Pudding needs to boil a minute or so before it thickens.

5. Stir in vanilla, then egg white, mixing thoroughly. Let cool 20 minutes, stir again and serve. Refrigerate or serve warm.

Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Variation: For Chocolate Marble Tapioca (this is super rich!): Sprinkle 1/2 cup chocolate chips over pudding after blending in egg white. Barely stir through once, then let stand 20 minutes for the chips to melt. Stir through once before serving. (For an evenly mixed chocolate tapioca, stir thoroughly.) Serve warm.

Note: The times above are for microwaves with 600 to 700 watts of power; for 500 to 600 W, add 10 seconds to each minute; for 400 to 500 W, add 20 seconds to each minute.

Lancaster County seeks dairy princess candidates

LANCASTER — Contestants are being sought for the 1986 Lancaster County Dairy Princess contest. This year's pageant will be held Saturday, June 21, at the Farm and Home Center, beginning with a reception at 7 p.m.

This marks the 50th year of June Dairy Month, and as part of the program, the local committee will recognize all former Lancaster County dairy princesses.

To be eligible to be dairy princess, young women must have completed their junior year of high school and not have reached their 24th birthday by Dec. 31, 1986.

Contestants must be the daughter of a dairy farmer, a dairy farm manager or herdsman or herself be a full-time employee on an operating dairy, or own two animals in a 4-H or FFA project, prior to May 1, 1986. Contestants under 21 must have parental permission.

Contestants must also be willing to attend a week-long training seminar during the summer if they are selected to be eligible for the state contest in September.

All contestants will be helping to celebrate June Dairy Month with various promotional events at area malls. Each contestant will receive a prize.

For more information and for applications, interested persons can contact Ruby Bollinger, R.D. 7, Box 182, Manheim, 17545. Her phone is 898-7622. Deadline is April 30.

Giving Small Electric Appliances

If you're considering giving a small electric appliance as a Mother's Day gift, be selective. Truly thoughtful gifts are ones that fulfill the real needs of the recipient. A gift is more appreciated if it is useful and used than if it is one season's "hot item" that occupies valuable storage space ever after. How many electric knives, waffle irons and fondue pots have gone this route?

Today it's difficult to think of a good preparation task that can't be done with one of the small electric appliances on the market. You can make crepes, cook a single hamburger, fill cream puffs, seal food storage bags and even sift flour electrically.

Many of these appliances are useful; most are relatively inexpensive and consume little energy. Does this make them ideal gifts? Maybe yes, maybe no. Ask yourself if the person you are considering the appliance for has a place to put if. If the answer is "no" you might turn your thoughts to a magazine subscription, a book or to apparel. If the answer is "yes," consider whether or not the person will actually use the appliance.

Some other questions the would-be gift giver should answer are:

- Does the appliance do a task now performed by another appliance? If so, will it do the job faster? Less expensively?
- Will it serve more than one function? If so, are these functions truly useful?
- Will it be easy to clean? Does it have immersible parts? Is it totally immersible?
- Does it have UL (Underwriter's Laboratory) listing certifying electrical safety on both the appliance and the cord?
- Is adequate wiring available? Too many small appliances can overload a circuit.
- Is there a warranty? Does it cover parts? Service?

Smells Sell Products

Ever wonder how the fresh lemon scent got into your dish-washing liquid or the herbal essence into your shampoo? The fragrance industry is best known for its perfumes and colognes. Almost unknown is its much larger business of producing smells for a variety of household products – soaps to floor wax.

Consumers like fragrances because they associate a good smell with a job well done – like clean clothes or a scrubbed floor. Pleasant-smelling products are more enjoyable to use.

Years ago, smells were added to soap to hide foul odors caused by the chemicals and fatty acids used as ingredients. The purpose of the fragrance was not to please, but to keep the product from displeasing.

But pure flower oils are expensive. It takes 700 pounds of petals to gather a pound of essential oil. Synthetic smells have recently been developed which can be produced at low cost and in large quantities. Their use has fed the craze for perfumed products. At the moment, the "back to nature" scents are popular.

Since the late 1960's when lemon-scented dishwashing liquid was first marketed, advertising firms began to emphasize the pleasing aromas of their products. The smell-that-sells has stampeded the market, especially in the last ten years.

Manufacturers now use smells to make their product different from competing products. Some advertising executives say that with many products so similar, fragrance promotion is the only technique left for use in selling consumer products.

Cakes make perfect endings to delightful dinners

Cakes are the perfect way to end a delicious spring dinner. A beautifully-iced two-layer cake will delight guests and family alike.

Whether it's spice, chocolate, or blueberries that give the cake its special flavor, it will surely bring glowing compliments to the chef. And, the wonderful aroma of fresh-baked goodies will welcome your dinner guests the moment they enter your home.

Next week, Home on the Range will feature lamb recipes. If you are a sheep grower, this is your chance to share with other cooks the best way of preparing your product. And even if you don't raise sheep, you'll want to share your family's favorite lamb recipe.

CHOCOLATETOWN SPECIAL CAKE

½ cup cocoa
½ cup boiling water
⅔ cup shortening
1¾ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
2¼ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups buttermilk or sour milk

Stir together cocoa and boiling water until smooth in small bowl; reserve. Cream shortening, sugar and vanilla in large mixer bowl. Add eggs; beat well. Combine flour, baking soda and salt; add alternately with buttermilk or sour milk to creamed mixture. Blend in cocoa mixture. Pour batter into three greased and floured 8-inch or two 9-inch layer pans; bake at 350°F. for 25 to 30 minutes for 8-inch layer or 35 to 40 minutes for 9-inch layers, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool completely; frost.

Note: to sour milk, use 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon vinegar; add milk to equal 1⅓ cups.

GOLDEN APPLE UPSIDE-DOWN COFFEE CAKE

3 medium Golden Delicious apples
⅓ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk

Core and slice 1 apple. Arrange slices in bottom of well-greased 9-inch tube pan. Pare, core and finely chop remaining apples to measure 1½ cups. Cream butter and sugar until light. Beat in eggs, lemon juice and peel. Combine flour, baking powder and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Fold in chopped apples. Spoon batter over apple slices in pan. Bake at 375°F. 40 to 45 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Turn onto serving plate. Serve warm or cooled. Makes 8 servings.

CARROT CAKE

2 cups white sugar
2 cups plus 2 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt

Mix together the above ingredients. Then blend in:

1¼ cups oil

Add:

2 jars junior food carrots

Pour batter into a 9x12-inch greased and floured pan.

Icing

THE ULTIMATE CHOCOLATE FRUIT CAKE

¾ cup shortening
2 cups sugar
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
5 eggs
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups flour
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted

Beat shortening and sugar. Add salt and vanilla, beating until smooth. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Mix buttermilk and baking soda in small bowl. Mixture will foam. Alternate flour and milk mixture to egg mixture, beginning and ending with flour. Stir in melted chocolate. Pour into a greased and waxed paper lined jelly roll pan, 15½x10½x1 inches. Bake at 325°F. for 35 minutes. Turn cake out onto a wire rack to cool. Remove paper and cut in half. Put two halves together with fruit filling in center.

Fruit Filling

¾ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup water
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup chopped dates
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup chopped dried figs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped walnuts

Pour milk, water and sugar in small saucepan and cook, stirring frequently until sugar dissolves. Add fruit and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Cook until thick. Cool completely and stir in vanilla and nuts. Top cake and sides with chocolate icing.

Chocolate Icing

1 6-ounce package semisweet chocolate chips
¼ cup butter
½ cup sour cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
3 cups confectioner's sugar

Melt chocolate chips over hot water. Remove from heat and stir in sour cream, vanilla, and salt. Gradually beat in sugar until icing is of spreading consistency.

BANANA CAKE

1¾ cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
1¼ cups buttermilk or soured milk
1 cup mashed banana (2 or 3 bananas)
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure and resift twice with the salt, baking powder and soda. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add dry ingredients alternately with buttermilk, beating until smooth after each addition. Add mashed banana and vanilla and beat until batter is smooth. Pour into 2 greased 9-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a 350°F. oven for about 30 minutes or until done. Cool and frost with 7-minute butter cream or uncooked confectioner's sugar frosting moistened with mashed banana to which a few drops of lemon juice are added.

Featured Recipe

Eating sensibly for good health means serving chicken often, and this week's featured recipe from the National Broiler Council will help you do just that.

The Council is sponsoring a National Chicken Cooking Contest that offers entrants a chance to win $10,000. The cook-off will take place in Jackson, Miss. in May 1987. A finalist from each state and the District of Columbia will each receive an expense-paid trip to compete there for a total of $20,000 in prizes.

To enter, write name, address and telephone number on the front of the recipe and mail it to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158 Central Station, Washington, DC 20005 before Oct. 15, 1986. Recipe will be judged on taste, appearance, simplicity and appeal. The only required ingredient is chicken — whole or any part or parts.

GINGER CITRUS CHICKEN

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut in parts, skin removed
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger root
1 teaspoon finely chopped cilantro
2 tablespoons finely grated onion
⅓ cup fresh orange juice
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated fresh orange peel
1 teaspoon grated fresh lemon peel
½ teaspoon pepper

In large shallow baking pan, place olive oil. Add chicken and roll parts to coat with oil; arrange chicken in single layer in pan. Sprinkle with ginger root and rub gently on chicken; sprinkle with cilantro. Sprinkle onion evenly over chicken. Mix together orange and lemon juices and peels; spoon over chicken and sprinkle with pepper. Place in 375°F. oven and bake about 30 minutes. Turn chicken and cook about 30 minutes more or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Makes 4 servings.

QUESTION - Mrs. Harvey Shoemaker, Mt. Joy, would like a recipe for cheese popcorn.

QUESTION - Mary Z. Reiff, East Earl, would like a recipe for whole wheat bread which also requires oatmeal.

ANSWER - Several weeks ago we ran a request for pie crust. While we did give one answer, Claire Johnson, Damascus, Md., would like to share her "fool proof" pie crust recipe.

Fool-Proof Pie Crust

4 cups flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 teaspoons salt
1¾ cups shortening
½ cup water

Sift dry ingredients. Add shortening. Blend with pastry blender until mixture is fine as corn meal. Stir together egg, water and vinegar; add to flour mixture. Shape into balls (4 to 6 depending on size of pie pan) and chill in refrigerator 15 or more minutes. Roll out on floured board. Line pie pan with pastry. Use for making your favorite baked pie.

This pastry will freeze. Shape into balls, flatten and wrap each ball separately in freezer paper, then place in plastic bag, exclude air and fasten with twister seal. When using, thaw and roll into the flakiest pie crust ever.

ANSWER - Thelma Betz, Glen Arm, Md., requested a recipe for White Texas Sheet Cake. Thanks go to Thelma Hostetter, Annville, for the following recipe.

White Texas Sheet Cake

Cake:
1 cup water
2 cups plus 2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup butter or margarine
2 cups plus 2 tablespoons flour
½ cup sour cream
½ teaspoon lemon extract
Rind of 1 lemon, grated

PEANUT BUTTER CAKE

3 cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup butter, softened
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
½ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup milk

Cream butter. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each. Add peanut butter and vanilla, continually beating until light and fluffy, about 2 minutes. Mix dry ingredients and add to butter mixture, alternating with milk. Beat just until smooth. Spread batter into 2 greased and floured 9-inch cake pans. Bake at 350°F. for 35 minutes. Set on wire racks and cool 10 minutes before removing from pans. When completely cool, frost top and sides of cake with frosting and sprinkle top with peanuts.

Frosting

1 cups chocolate syrup
1 cup peanut butter
¼ cup light corn syrup

Add corn syrup to the chocolate and peanut butter which was beaten together until smooth. Beat all until thick enough to spread.

Bring water and butter to boil. Remove from heat and add while hot, flour, sugar and baking soda. Add lemon rind and extracts. Pour into greased and floured 11x14-inch jelly roll pan. Bake at 350° F. for about 20 minutes.

Frosting:

½ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon lemon extract
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
6 tablespoons milk
3½ cups confectioner's sugar
Rind of 1 lemon, grated

To prepare frosting, boil butter and milk. Remove from heat and stir in confectioner's sugar, lemon rind and extracts. Frost cake while warm. When cool, cut into bars.

ANSWER - Dorothy S. Riesterer, New Providence, asked for a salt rising bread recipe. Thanks go to Mrs. Donald Hill, Apalachin, NY, for the following recipe.

Salt Rising Bread

Starter:

3 medium potatoes
2 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons cornmeal
2 teaspoon sugar
4 cups boiling water

Dough:

2 cups lukewarm water
1/8 teaspoon soda
10 to 12 cups flour
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Pare and slice potatoes. Add cornmeal, sugar, the 2 teaspoons salt and boiling water. Wrap bowl in a heavy cloth. Cover and allow to stand in warm place overnight.

In morning, remove potatoes. Add milk, soda, salt and shortening. Add sufficient flour to make a dough just stiff enough to knead. Knead until smooth and elastic. Form into loaves. Place in well-oiled pans. Cover again and place in warm location to rise until double in size. Bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes. Makes 3 loaves.

Note: If the risings are not very foaming after standing overnight, throw them out and start anew since they serve the same purpose as yeast does in yeast bread.

ANSWER - Mrs. Belinda Myers, Dallastown, requested a recipe for moist spice cake. Thanks go to Mary Reiff, Fivepointville, for the following recipe and to all others who shared similar recipes.

Spice Cake

½ cup shortening
2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups brown sugar
2½ cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
1¼ cups sour milk

Cream together shortening and sugar. Add egg yolks and beat well. Sift flour, measure and add salt, soda, baking powder and spices. Sift again. Add dry ingredients to first mixture alternately with milk and flavoring. Beat well after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake at 350° F. for 40 minutes or until done.

Note: Instead of using 1¼ cups sour milk, you can use 1 cup sweet milk.

Kid's Korner

Library of Congress conducts rescue mission to save deteriorating books

WASHINGTON — America's books are crumbling away at an alarming rate, and nobody is more aware of it than Dr. Peter G. Sparks.

In a box in his office at the Library of Congress, Sparks keeps a copy of an 1896 book with the intriguing title of "Sartor Resartus: The Life and Opinions of Herr Teufelsdrockh," by Thomas Carlyle.

Pick up the book and turn one of its dry, yellowed pages. Bits of paper flutter to the carpet. In a few years the book will be unreadable.

Fortunately, it won't be lost, because it's been transferred to microfilm. But millions of other books, from every library in the country, won't be so fortunate. They're on an irretrievable path toward becoming confetti.

Sparks, a chemist who has been the library's director of preservation for the past five years, uses the Carlyle volume to dramatize the nature of the problem.

Rescue Operation

Under his direction, the library has been conducting a rescue operation that should, in a few years, give a new lease on life to millions of books.

The Library of Congress, whose vast collections contain more than 80 million items, houses the world's largest assemblage of stored knowledge. Its general and law collections alone encompass some 13 million volumes.

Library officials estimate that one-fourth of the books in those collections — about 3.25 million volumes — fall in the category of "brittle books." And the library is losing more books at a rate estimated at 77,000 volumes a year. The process is "one of the most unrecognized and serious perils that afflicts civilization," says librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin.

The villain is acid. Since the mid-1800's, when mass production of books accompanied a spurt in literacy, paper has been made from wood pulp. Its "sizing," the material used to fill its pores and make it suitable for printing, is acidic. Over time, acid destroys the paper.

Today's average book has a life expectancy of 20 to 50 years before it turns brittle, Sparks says. Books printed on better-grade paper may make it to 100 or more. Newspapers and paperbacks are the first to go.

Really old books aren't as much of a problem. They were printed on paper made from rags, and they weren't acidic.

One way to ensure greater longevity for modern books is to print them on nonacidic paper. Another way is to find a method for removing the acid from books printed on regular paper.

Neutralizing Acid

For the past few years, the Library of Congress has been working toward an effective mass deacidification technique, experimenting with its own patented process, which uses diethyl zinc gas — DEZ for short — to neutralize the acid.

Work has progressed enough so that groundbreaking is planned for an $11.5 million book-deacidification facility at Fort Detrick, an Army post near Frederick, Md., about 40 miles north of Washington.

When completed, the 40,000-square-foot facility is expected to be able to deacidify 500,000 to 1 million of the library's volumes a year, with an eventual capacity of 2 million, Sparks says.

But there's a potential delay. The deacidification process must take place in airtight chambers, because DEZ bursts into flame when it comes in contact with either air or water. In congressional testimony in February, Sparks disclosed that there had been two accidental fires at the deacidification test facility at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

The researchers and builders, he testified, are trying to determine if design changes are needed at Fort Detrick. If answers aren't found, Sparks says, "Our plan is to take the most prudent approach and delay awarding the contract until such time as these problems can be solved."

Sparks plays down the significance of the fires and predicts that the project will progress nearly on schedule, with groundbreaking this spring or summer, opening in 1987, and fully operational status in 1989.

"We're putting an incredible amount of effort into safety, and we're absolutely convinced that it will be entirely safe," he says.

There's no question about the preservative qualities of the process, which takes five days. A DEZ-treated book may last 400 years or more.

To Share Technology

Once the kinks are out of the Library of Congress facility, the library will be willing to share its patent with other libraries at no charge, Sparks says, saving millions more books worldwide.

Librarians have known about brittle books for years, and the DEZ process isn't the only answer. An Illinois company, for example, has developed a process called Wei T'o that uses a liquid deacidification solution.

Kenneth F. Foster of the Public Archives of Canada, one of the biggest users of Wei T'o, says his agency is now deacidifying about 50,000 books a year, and "generally speaking, we're quite happy with it."

(Turn to Page B11)

Whoosh! A hefty puff by Peter Waters, Library of Congress conservation officer, is all it takes to make confetti out of the pages of a book made brittle by slow-working acid in the paper. Using a patented deacidification process, the library is leading U.S. efforts to add years to the life on endangered books.

Nobody claims to have the final word on preservation, and nobody knows what will be done after the shelf life of deacidified books expires in a few hundred years.

The person overseeing the whole preservation effort at the Library of Congress is Deputy Librarian William J. Welsh. In 1980, dissatisfied with the library's lack of a specific program, he met a friend, William O. Baker, then board chairman of Bell Laboratories, at a building dedication.

"Bill, stop what you're doing now and take a look at this technology," Baker advised Welsh. "It holds great promise."

After receiving that advice, Welsh appointed several committees. "The problem was that we were going to lose our cultural heritage, our cultural record," he says. "We had the advantage over anybody else, because we have a large preservation activity — over 100 people involved in this preservation in various stages."

Two-Pronged Attack

Welsh decided to attack the problem in two ways: through the mass deacidification program for books and through an optical-disk program that uses sophisticated laser technology to miniaturize and preserve other data, from periodicals and newspapers to works of art.

Of the optical-disk technology, Welsh says, "I suspect that in due course it will replace microfilm" and eventually will be used to preserve books.

Welsh reaches for a Louis L'Amour paperback, autographed for him by the author, a prolific writer of Western novels. "This is not going to last 20 years, not even this personal inscription," Welsh complains.

But, he says, looking fondly at the yellowing novel, "I think books will continue forever and ever and ever."

Dairy Sculpture Contest planned at Willow Valley Mall

LANCASTER — A dairy sculpture contest will be held at Willow Valley Mall June 13 to 14 in conjunction with the Lancaster County dairy princess pageant.

Entries should be at the mall between 8 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. on June 13. Prizes will be awarded at 9 p.m. that day. Entries should be picked up between 3 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. June 14. The mall is located off Route 222 South.

Sculptures entered in the contest may not exceed 6 feet high or 4 feet wide. The sculpture must be constructed from containers that contained REAL dairy products. Those not conforming will be disqualified.

Sculptures will be judged in three categories — under 10, 10 to 16 years, and over 16. First prize in each category is $25, second price, $15, and third prize $10.

An overall grand champion will be named and the winning sculptures will be displayed at the dairy princess pageant at the Farm and Home Center on June 21.

Applications can be sent to: Dairy Sculpture Contest, 258 N. Fulton Street, Strasburg, PA 17579, before May 21.

NOBODY HAS MORE HORSEPOWER UNDER FORTY.

Under forty horses, nobody sells more tractors than we do. One reason is simple. We give you more choices.

There are sixteen compact sizes, each a different model. One of them should fit you perfectly. And once you settle on the horsepower, there are still more choices.

Pick special options like 4-wheel drive, power steering or a hydraulic shuttle transmission. Or choose a Kubota-made implement, the best match for any of our Kubota tractors.

There are, however, a couple of decisions we've made for you.

For example, Kubota's own liquid-cooled diesel engine comes standard in every model. An advanced design, it's built for efficient operation. So a little horsepower works like more.

We've also chosen the color.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

During my tour of Natchez, Miss., we visited three large mansions. Natchez was settled in 1716 by the French.

Our first stop was "Linden" whose doorway is famous as it was filmed in "Gone with the Wind." The earliest part of this house was built in 1792 and the west wing was used as a schoolroom for the 13 children in the family. Now the sixth generation lives here. There is a drawing room and a banquet room with a magnificant cypress "punkah" hanging over the table. The "punkah" was used to create a breeze and to chase flies from the food.

Next we stopped at "Melrose" with its elaborately carved original rococo revival furniture and separate building with a kitchen. Our last stop was at "Twin Oaks" where they also had "puddle" curtains. They were so named as the excess material lay on the floor thus showing that the owners could afford to buy more fabric than necessary.

We had free time for lunch and I ate in a Health Food store with three other people. Then I walked several blocks and went through some antique shops. That afternoon we drove along the Gulf Coast to Biloxi, Miss. We crossed the Pearl River and saw the 26-mile long man-made beach. I walked alone there one cold and windy afternoon.

That night I ate at a cafeteria in a large shopping mall with a couple from Missouri and discovered that we had a mutual friend, a professor at Penn State University. The next morning I took another of my 110 pictures. This one of the Gulf Coast Lighthouse, an 1848 landmark. It was painted black when Lincoln was assassinated and was draped when John Kennedy was shot.

Our last stop was at Bellingrath Gardens, Theodore, Ala. Here we saw 65 acres of manicured lawns and 250,000 azalea plants in full bloom. Their many varieties of roses bloom from April to December. They had to spend four million dollars to repair the 1979 hurricane damage.

We had our farewell meal at Cock O'The Walk where we were served hot corn bread in iron skillets, slaw in stoneware crocks and catfish and hush puppies on a tin plate. For dessert we had Mississippi Mud Cake. The tour guide gave small "fun" gifts to different members and I was given pens and stationary from all of the hotels because I was continually taking notes.

Our last morning in Biloxi the temperature was 32°F. as we walked to a nearby Waffle Shop. Then we drove to New Orleans Airport and I flew into Atlanta, Ga., where I changed planes for Philadelphia. As I ate a delicious meal on the airplane, I was treated to a beautiful view of Washington, D.C. at night with thousands of glistening lights.

Search begins for Schuylkill County dairy princess candidates

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN – All single young women who are between the ages of 16 and 24 and from a dairy farm background are eligible to compete for the title of 1986 Schuylkill County Dairy Princess, announces Elaine Moyer, chairperson of the Schuylkill County Dairy Princess Committee.

The contest covers Schuylkill County.

The winner will be eligible to compete, at the state level, for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess.

Twenty-nine state princesses and hundreds of county princesses have served as spokespersons for the dairy industry in Pennsylvania over the last thirty years. They appear in shopping malls, fairs, supermarkets and on radio and television to educate consumers about the dairy farmer's products.

Any single woman who has completed her junior year in high school, is not over 24 years of age, never married and whose parents or guardians are engaged in dairy farming is eligible to compete for the title. A young lady is also eligible if she, herself, is a full-time employee on an operating dairy farm or owns at least two dairy animals in a 4-H or F.F.A. project prior to May 1, 1986.

The winner of the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Pageant receives a $500 cash award. The first and second runner-up will receive a $300 and $200 cash award respectively. The state title is honorary and would not interrupt school or regular employment plans. The State Pageant is coordinated through Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc.

Young women interested in entering the Schuylkill County Dairy Princess Pageant should contact Elaine Moyer at RD 1 Box 207 Schuylkill Haven or Rhoda Daubert at RD 2 Pine Grove, PA by April 19, 1986.

Berks home economist wins scholarship

UNIVERSITY PARK – Michelle S. Rodgers, Berks County extension home economist, has been awarded Penn State's Helen E. Bell Scholarship. The $500 scholarship was awarded to Rodgers to assist her this fall when she takes a one-year leave of absence to complete a master's degree in rural sociology.

Helen E. Bell, left, congratulates Berks County Extension home economist Michelle Rodgers. Rodgers received the $500 scholarship that was established in honor of Bell, who retired in 1983 from a long and distinguished career with Penn State.

Rodgers has worked as a home economist and with youth programs with Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service for nearly six years, first in Lancaster County and most recently in Berks County. She is responsible for developing and coordinating educational programs addressing family strengths, clothing and textiles, child development and 4-H youth home economics programs.

Rodgers writes two newspaper columns for which she received a communication award from the National Association of Extension Home Economists. She also serves as an extension computer software subject matter specialist, developing computer templates and sharing her expertise with Extension colleagues and clients.

Rodgers says her graduate studies will focus on family stress and strengths. "Families and family issues will continue to be an important priority for Extension in the future. After all, we're all involved in family relationships," she continues. "By focusing on family studies as I complete my degree, I feel I can broaden and enhance the county extension family living program."

Rodgers will be based at University Park for one year while completing her studies. The second recipient of the Helen E. Bell scholarship, she is the daughter of Ken and Anna Skiles of Narvon.

Helen E. Bell, who was with Penn State for 19 years, served as state family living program leader and professor of home management extension. The scholarship, for home economists pursuing graduate studies, was established by Dr. Bell's colleagues when she retired in December 1983. Scholarship contributions, which are still being accepted, will be used to establish an endowment to insure the scholarship will continue in the future.

Luzerne Extension plans homemaker's day

WILKES-BARRE – "Get Ready for the 90's" is the theme for the Annual Luzerne County Extension Homemaker's Day set for Thursday, April 17, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Genetti's Best Western Motor Lodge, Hazelton.

The day's events will include the following programs:

• "Diet and Cancer" by Dr. Joy Armillay, Registered Dietician. She will discuss what cancer is and how it starts, how the amount of fat you eat affects your risk of developing certain types of cancer, how to change a dinner menu to lower fat intakes, and how to change your ingredient substitution in recipes to lower their fat content.

• "Decision Making When Starting a Home-Based Business" by Dr. Mary Saylor, Ph.D, arts specialist and assistant professor of Extension. She will present an introduction to basic concerns and decisions in starting a home-based business, including types of businesses that can be conducted from the home.

• "Computers-The Wave of the Future" by Alfred T. Skala, Northeastern regional computer specialist. He will offer an introduction to computer programs to help families make wise decisions when sewing for profit, family budgeting, avoiding major stresses in our daily living and counting cholesterol in the daily diet.

"Take this day to visit with old friends, meet new friends, see displays of many items created by county homemakers" says Mrs. Josephine Kotch, Extension home economist in Luzerne County.

Many handmade door prizes will be awarded. A nominal fee will be charged to cover lunch and expenses.

For reservations call or write our office for luncheon tickets: Homemaker's Day, Luzerne County Extension Service, Courthouse Annex, 5 Water Street, Wilkes-Barre, PA 18711; phone 825-1701 or 459-0736, ext 701 (Hazelton Area).

Paid reservations are due no later than April 9, 1986.

Farm vacation host families share knowledge with other farmers seeking income supplement

BY MARY MAXWELL
Staff Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE – It isn't often that those who run a successful business are willing to share their secrets of success with potential competitors. But that's what happened at a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Association in the typical farmers-cooperating-with-farmers spirit.

Farm Vacation host families are eager to have other farm families experience what they describe as "terrific." They invited prospective farm vacation host families to come to their spring meeting held at the South Ridge Motor Inn.

Members with extensive experience – 36 years in the case of Lucy and Jane Gangloff – provided valuable information to others who were looking for a supplement to farm income.

Several women found that it was the ideal part-time job. They could stay at home and do what they do best–provide good meals and comfortable lodging for guests.

"It works well for a mother with children at home," reported Joyce Renshaw who operates Rennell Farm. "We used to all go hiking and swimming with the guests when the children were at home. But now I send a Sullivan County vacation brochure with the reservation confirmation and expect guests to plan their own days."

Prospective hosts had questions about the amount of time hosting guests would require. If there are not children at home to help with laundry, cleaning and cooking, veteran members suggested hiring a teenager to help.

Some host families want to be involved with their guests throughout the day. Others, particularly those in the southeast corner of the state, find guests like to be on their own but appreciate a quiet, rural home to come back to after a day of sightseeing.

The flexibility of the operation appealed to many. "Even though we're open year-round," said Alberetta Wanner who lives with her family on a 245-acre dairy farm, "July and August are our busy months and again during the hunting season here in Tioga County. That suits us."

Joseph Cardenuto, representing Penn State's Department of Agriculture Economics and Rural Sociology, co-sponsor of the workship with the Farm Vacation Association, discussed advertising with the group.

Steve Williams, photographer for Ag Communication on the campus, showed how a good picture in the Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Directory can promote business.

He was followed by Sam Wasson, an insurance agent. Wasson urged old and new group members to re-evaluate their insurance coverage. He believes a farm owner's policy without special endorsements or a farm owner's comprehensive personal liability policy are not adequate.

Because of liability concerns, the audience agreed that they would be less likely to invite guests to help with farm work when it involves potentially hazardous equipment. This was a change from a farm vacation tradition of involving guests in all aspects of farm life.

New families asked how to handle problems and Cardenuto suggested that hosts, "Spell out acceptable and unacceptable behavior as soon as the guests arrive. Tell them about the electric fences, which animals can be approached and which can not. If an agreement is reached right away, then you will just need to remind them later."

Association members reported very few guests they would not invite back. Many reported becoming warm friends with guest families.

"We've been invited by our guests to visit Long Island and Florida," said one participant. "We think of it as our vacation too," said another Association member. "The whole family looks forward to having visitors from maybe the state of Washington one week and then from Japan the next. It's rewarding and educational for us as well as our guests."

Others saw benefits for the agricultural community, as well. Non-farm guests see how uncertain farm life is. What happens when there's too much rain or not enough. "I know this summer, particularly, there will be lots of discussion at the supper table with guests about farm problems," speculated a dairy farmer host.

The group urged families thinking about becoming farm vacation hosts to join the Association. Not only does it provide advertising for members but an evaluation when a team visits newly-established host farms to help forsee problems or sooth anxiety about the new venture.

This on-the-farm consultation occurs before a farm vacation site is listed in the annual directory. The Association's current directory is available free from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110.

"Pennsylvania farm families are fortunate to be located where they are", said Cardenuto. "They have lovely, peaceful farms located within easy traveling distance of major urban areas. Farm vacations is a good business to get into."

Volunteers study farm accident rescue techniques

Staff Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK – Sixty Pennsylvania emergency care and rescue volunteers will be better able to handle farm accidents because of a four-day training course. When they return to their hometowns, they will know rescue techniques which prevent further injury to farm accident victims while preventing injury to the rescuer.

Course instructors Dennis Murphy, Agricultural Extension safety specialist and David Lindstrom, director of Penn State's Office of Emergency Medical Services, combine their experience and knowledge to make rescue effective and safe. Murphy and Lindstrom use a varied format of instruction: video tape presentations ("We can't dismantle farm equipment at every workshop," says Murphy), graphics to point out rescue techniques, workbooks, and hands-on experience with farm equipment.

Last Saturday the course focused on tractor accidents. Participants first studied tapes on tractor operations, tractor overturns and PTO accidents, then they operated tractors to develop familiarity with those machines.

On Sunday the group again viewed tapes, now on rescue techniques involving conventional balers, large round balers and silage wagons. In the afternoon the participants examined that equipment with the instructors to reinforce learning from the video tapes.

The rescue volunteers will return to the Penn State campus on April 19th for two more days of in-class instruction and field experience. At that time they will study rescue techniques for accidents involving manure storage, grain bins, silos, cornpickers and combines.

Participants who successfully pass all examinations will be certified as agricultural rescue technicians by the Pennsylvania Department of Health as part of the state's comprehensive rescue certification program. These rescue volunteers will join others trained in the past nine years to help Pennsylvania farm accident victims.

Mike Koon, equipment instructor and director of Seven Mountains Emergency Medical Services points out features on a round baler that hinder rescue operations.

Adams County Dairy Promotion Committee announces Dairy Month poster contest

NEW OXFORD — The Adams County Dairy Promotion committee is challenging all of the county's dairy farm families to take part in promoting dairy products during June Dairy Month.

They might even win a cash reward in the process.

All it takes is a large piece of poster board, a few art supplies and a touch of imagination.

Dairy farm families are invited to design a poster promoting dairy products, and then display that poster on their farm, where it is readily visible from the road.

Judges will view the poster June 2, and select three winners for cash prizes. First place winner will receive $25, second place award is $15, and $10 will go to the third-placing poster. Judges' decisions are final and winners will be announced during the Adams County Dairy Princess pageant on June 14 at the Biglerville High School.

"This is an inexpensive way to promote dairy products," says Sandy Flickinger, who is co-chairing the contest with Charlotte Clowney. "It will put promotional pieces not in just one location, but in lots of places all over the county."

Posters will be judged on neatness, originality and the information presented. They should be designed on any color, standard poster-cardboard, 22 x 28 inches. It is suggested that posters be covered with a clear plastic wrap or contact paper for weather resistance.

Pencils, pens, magic markers, cutouts, and other art techniques may be used in the poster design. Entries must promote dairy products, be a family project, and be displayed as of June 1 in a site visible to traffic.

Entry forms are being sent through the Adams County Extension dairy newsletter and are due by May 20. For additional information, contact Sandy Flickinger, 624-8036, or Charlotte Clowney, 334-7269.

Delaware Food Festival planned for May

DOVER, Del. — The 2nd annual Delaware Food Festival has been set for Friday, May 2, 1986 at the Hilton Hotel in Wilmington.

The Food Festival, sponsored by the Delaware Department of Agriculture, will feature Delaware grown and produced food products. Experts will be on hand to present programs on purchasing, storing and preparing selected food items.

Other commodities will be featured through exhibits set up in the Hilton's New Castle Ballroom.

The featured foods will be dairy, poultry, mushrooms and potatoes, according to Bill Sammons, marketing manager with the Agriculture Department's Marketing Section.

"The main thrust of this year's festival is on eating foods that are not only good . . . but good for you," said Sammons. "A home economist with the Delmarva Poultry Industry will demonstrate a new chicken recipe and offer suggestions on 'Chicken for Healths Sake.'

"The American Mushroom Institute is providing a person to prepare Delaware-grown mushrooms in a way that most cooks probably haven't thought of. The National Potato Board is arranging for a cooking demonstration on preparing nutritious potatoes, and we will round out the program with a nutrition consultant from the Dairy Council on how to avoid osteoporosis," Sammons said.

In addition, representatives from the Pork Industry, Soybean Industry, Delaware Dairy Industry, and Watermelon Industry will have booths set up offering free literature, recipes, samples and other promotional materials. Door prizes from many Delaware companies will be given away.

Admission to the Delaware Food Festival is free of charge. Registration and exhibits will open at 8:30 a.m.; the presentations will begin at 9 a.m. The formal program will conclude by 12:30. The Hilton Hotel has arranged for their famous buffet lunch to be served immediately after the program for those wanting to stay. The Hilton is located on I-95 at Naamans Road.

For further information on the Delaware Food Festival, contact the Department of Agriculture at 736-4811 or 800-282-8685.

Solanco Young Farmers recognize top members at annual banquet

QUARRYVILLE – The seventh annual Solanco Young Farmers banquet was held April 3 at the Memorial United Methodist Church, Quarryville. Approximately 120 members and guests attended the banquet.

State Rep. John Barley of the 100th Legislative District, the featured speaker, focused on the current farm economy and the role of the different levels of government in helping to solve agricultural issues.

Barley also presented C. Martin Greenleaf Jr. with a citation from the State House of Representatives for his accomplishments as the 1985 regional winner in Outstanding Young Farmer Over 30 competition.

The Solanco Chapter recognized Dr. Carl Troop DVM, Quarryville, for his contributions and support of the Young Farmer program. Dr. Troop received an engraved plague in appreciation of his efforts.

Samuel Glick, Quarryville, received the active member award.

Randy Clark, Quarryville, was named the Outstanding Young Farmer Under 30, and P. Robert Wenger was selected as the Outstanding Young Farmer Over 30.

The following dairy production awards were presented:

High Holstein Herd, Robert Kauffman Jr., Peach Bottom, 20,266 pounds of milk and 765 pounds of fat. Kauffman also had the high cow for milk and high cow for butterfat with 29,128 pounds and 1131 pounds respectively.

High Jersey Herd, Jay Marvin Herr, Holtwood, 13,437 pounds of milk and 650 pounds of fat. Herr's cows with 18,120 pounds of milk and 849 pounds of butterfat also took top honors in the Jersey breed.

High Guernsey Herd, Lindenhof Farm, Oxford, 15,192 pounds of milk and 707 pounds of fat. The high Guernsey for milk with 15,192 pounds and the high cow for butterfat with 980 pounds was also owned by Lindenhof Farm.

The Most Improved Herd award was presented to Graywood Farms, Peach Bottom. Their production increased 1641 pounds of milk and 61 pounds of fat from the previous year.

The following corn awards were presented to winners in the corn production contest:

Dale Peifer, Kirkwood, produced 164 bushels of shelled corn per acre to win the corn grain division. Walter Pownall, Quarryville, was second with 160 bushels, and R. Edwin Harnish, Christiana, was third with 156 bushels. Walter Pownall received the trophy for the highest grain yield average for the past three years with 174 bushels.

In the corn silage division, Larry Aaron, Quarryville, placed first with 26.5 tons per acre of 65% moisture silage. Karl Herr, Kirkwood, was second with 25.4 tons per acre and Walter Pownall's 25.0 tons per acre was third. Pownall also received the trophy for the highest silage yield average for the past three years with 24.2 tons per acre.

Lancaster Boys, Girls Clubs seek donations for garage sale

LANCASTER – The Boys Club and Girls Club of Lancaster continue to seek donations for the Great American Garage Sale to be held Saturday, May 10, at the Lancaster Shopping Center.

A variety of items are needed, (excluding clothing), in any of the following categories: household goods, appliances, antiques, collectibles, sporting goods, plants, garden equipment, children's furniture, toys, books, office furniture, art, cars and livestock.

The clubs are also seeking donations of services (lawn care, dinners, theater tickets) and excess merchandise. All donations are tax deductible.

Please call the Boys Club at 392-6343 for more information.

York County extension seeks gardeners

YORK – Hobby gardeners with lots of experience to share with others could be master gardeners. That's right. The York County Extension Service is looking for experienced gardeners willing to train for master gardening certification.

Trained gardeners will be required to volunteer no less than 30 hours of Extension horticultural work for complete certification.

Starting this month, interested gardeners who want to learn more about qualifying for the Master Gardener program can write for an application to: York County Extension Service, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402. No inquiries will be accepted after April 15 and only a limited number of qualified individuals will be trained.

Elementary students raise funds for farmland preservation

MILLERSVILLE — A lesson on soil and water conservation convinced Eshleman Elementary School sixth graders to become a part of Lancaster County's farmland preservation effort.

Students in Ron Walton's sixth-grade class will be collecting funds during the next several weeks to help save Lancaster County's rich farmland from development. The class is busy making "silos" from plastic soda bottles to place in each classroom in the elementary school. Students will be asked to contribute to the effort by placing their donations in the homemade silos.

Students are also required to write an essay on what farming means to them.

In addition, the students will present a musical entitled "Dear Abby," which portrays John Adams' life. Any donations collected from the performances and in the silos will be donated to the Ag Preserve Board. Performances are scheduled for Monday, May 5 at 1:45 p.m.; Tuesday, May 6 at 9:30 a.m.; and Wednesday, May 7 at 7 p.m.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

You've all heard that classic debate: which came first, the chicken or the egg? Here's another, related, debate for you to consider; this one deals strictly with mothers who also feed livestock.

Where do you first learn to referee: for the kids or for the animals?

How well I recall the scrapping when they were little.

"You got the biggest piece!"

"No! You got the biggest piece!"

And then a duo of voices. "Mom! Make (him)-(her) stop taking the biggest!"

This argument was equally applicable to pieces of pie, a spot in the sandpile, or part of the back seat of the car. I only wish I could comfort young mothers by assuring them that, as the kids grow older, such territorial mania diminishes. It doesn't. They just argue louder.

Anyway, when it comes to dividing food, I once heard a wise approach to dealing with the "but his piece is bigger" hassle.

One kid was instructed to make the division: cut the pie, the cake, or pick out the cookies. Then...the other one got to pick his (her) selection first. It didn't take long for the individuals involved to learn to divide very equally or end up with the lesser choice.

If only calves could be so encouraged toward farming. Or sheep, pigs, steers, turkeys, horses or whichever members of the animal kingdom you deal with on a regular basis.

When our baby calves are tiny, this is no problem. Each has an individual pen, complete with its own feed and water bowls, plus a hay rack. After just a couple of weeks growth though, the snitch-from-your-neighbor complex starts to rear its ugly head.

Regardless of the quality or volume of hay put in the rack, what's next door is inevitably softer, greener and more flavorful. Even if it means kinking a young neck at a ninty-degree angle and stretching the tongue two feet to reach the neighbor's coveted feed.

When calves are weaned and moved into group pens, this tendency assumes full-blown "hoggish" proportions. (Apologies to my pork-producing friends for the use of that term.)

Now comes the test of a feeder schooled in the fine art of "mother-refereeing." Just how do you keep the pushy, oversized bully of the pen from stealing all the feed the Mild, Meek Millie Milktoast? And what about poor little Shy Shellie, the bashful heifer who stands back behind the rest and refuses to shove her head between a pair dubbed Armytank and Bulldozer?

Back to cut-the-pie strategy. Armytank and Bulldozer must be tricked into believing that breaktast is served at only one corner of the feed trough. Then, while they're busy gulping down the goodies, the more backward girls can be coaxed to the other side for their share. This will last, maybe, until your back is turned, when Armytank and Bulldozer will level their shy penmates with the swipe of a head and devour the feed trough remnants. Sooner or later, the only solution for such bullies is to move them into a pen of others more their size or the old dose- of- their- own- medicine approach.

Frequently, my belief is reaffirmed that kids are kids, be they two or four-legged.

Someone should issue mothers and farm wives who feed livestock regulation black and white-striped referee shirts.

Just call it the uniform of the profession.

Our ag lenders know both sides of your fence.

To be a good ag lender, you have to know farming as well as you know banking. And that's the tough criterion every Commonwealth National ag lender must meet.

Because at Commonwealth, we've always known that south central Pennsylvania can only be as strong as its agricultural economy.

So our commitment to farming continues with our pledge to support the agricultural community in every way possible.

And that means having ag lenders in place throughout our marketing area.

Ag lenders who know both sides of your fence.

Penn State Square Dance Festival set for July

UNIVERSITY PARK — The annual Penn State Square Dance Festival will have more hours of dancing, more callers, more halls for dancing and more levels in its 1986 version.

This year the Penn State Round and Square Dance Festival will feature three square dance callers and a professional round dance cuer on staff for the square dance weekend scheduled July 25 and 26 at the University Park Campus of Penn State.

Square dance callers Will Larson of Connecticut, Jim Mayo of New Hampshire and John Marshall of Virginia and round cuers Hap and A. J. Wolcott from New Jersey will be featured in a dance program that's 50 percent larger than last year's program.

"With our expanded schedule and more callers," explains festival chairman Carter Ackerman, "We can reemphasize our program for newer modern western square dancers and provide an expanded schedule for the more experienced dancers including, for the first time this year, a full schedule of advanced dancing. In addition we've made it possible for dancers to attend the whole festival or any part of it."

"One of the real strengths of the Penn State Festival has always been its emphasis on the dance program for the newer dancer. This year we're reemphasizing that program and encouraging every new dancer in the state to come and enjoy the dancing and good times of the festival," Ackerman said.

"On the Penn State Campus we have all the facilities for a perfect dance weekend," he said. "The dance floors are ideal and the overnight accommodations in the university dorms are convenient and inexpensive."

This year's festival, the 33rd annual, will include time for dancing and dance exhibitions. Full and part time square dance callers who attend the festival may also take part in an educational clinic taught by the professional calling staff of the festival.

The annual festival is sponsored by the College of Agriculture Short Course and Conference Office in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service. Additional information may be obtained from 306 Agriculture Administration Building, University Park, Pa., 16802.

Franklin County tractor club honors members

First year winners were Gilbert Slothour, first; Marcus Hess, second; and David Frey, third.

In the second-year group, winners were Craig Carbaugh, first; Rick Hissong, second; and Steve Hykes, third.

Third-year winners were Regina Christman, first; Tim Stoner, second; and Richard Zeger, third.

Over 90 members, parents, leaders and guests attended the annual program. Awards were provided by the Franklin County 4-H Development Fund. Rolls for the covered dish meal were donated by Martin's Bakery of Chambersburg.

The evening also included a slide presentation on Alaska by Don and Ruth Rotz.

Little Dutchmen FFA

Two members of the Little Dutchmen FFA dominated the Lebanon County Prepared Public Speaking Contest held at Lebanon County Vo-Tech on April 3.

Sue Elliott took first place, while second went to Dale Balmer.

The group's parliamentary procedure team also took first place in the county contest, beginning its fight to defend the state title.

KUHN

GYRORAKE GA300GT

The GA300GT rake was designed for the hay producer that desires a pull type rake. This new pull type model is easy to attach to the tractor, as well as adjust from the transport position to the raking position.

This Kuhn gyrorake will rake your hay into a windrow, double windrow or turn a windrow cleanly and handle your hay delicately.

The GA300GT is easy to maintain: The rake has a greased gear box which eliminates cam friction or wear. The cams controlling the tine arms are prelubricated ball-bearings requiring no maintenance.

Kutztown FFA, Young Farmers honor top members at annual banquet

KUTZTOWN — The Kutztown FFA and Young Farmers Chapters held their annual banquet March 21 at the Kutztown Grange Hall. One hundred fifty persons attended the event, which featured a family-style ham and beef dinner.

State FFA Vice-President Charles Kline offered greetings from the state association and encouraged members to take hold of their opportunities. Phoebe Bitler, Young Farmer Spokesperson For Agriculture, talked about "Getting The Most For Your Food Dollar."

Chapter FFA officers opened the program with appropriate ceremonies. A slide presentation highlighting the trip to the National FFA Convention in Kansas City was narrated by Troy Seidel.

Awards presented during the event included the Honorary Chapter Degree given to the following for their time, effort, support, and promotion: Charles Suloff, Nancy Unger, Elva Herbert, and Marylin Miller.

For the assistance throughout the year the following received certificates of appreciation: John Koester, Joanne Dreibelbis, Diane Dietrich, and Brenda Seidel.

Tammy Miller and Naomi Herbert received Keystone Farmer degree keys. Harold Fleisher, superintendent of Kutztown School District, made the presentations, which were based on the student's leadership involvement and project achievements.

Foundation medals and proficiency awards were earned by students in the following areas: swine production - Robert Adam; dairy production - Tammy Miller; fruit and/or vegetable production - Lisa Reinert; placement in agriculture production - Ronald Zimmerman; specialty animal production - Andrew Miller; feed grain production - Norman Kehl; and public speaking - Troy Seidel.

Stacey Meyers was awarded a state proficiency plaque in the area of dairy production. Stacey placed first in state competition.

Recognized as the outstanding first-year student was Jonathan Rohrbach, Star Greenhand. Star Chapter Farmer and the Dekalb Award were presented to the outstanding senior, Tammy Miller.

Special FFA Awards presented included: Outstanding Record Book - Troy Seidel, Lisa Reinert, Tammy Miller and Stacey Meyers; Scholarship - Troy Seidel and Lisa Reinert; Salesmanship - Lisa Reinert, Andrew Miller, and Sean Murphy; Leadership - Tammy Miller; Greenhouse Award - Randy Groff.

Young Farmer Awards were presented to Jeffrey C. Miller, Oustanding Young Farmer under 30; and Kenneth Schlegel, Outstanding Young Farmer over 30.

The Young Farmers entertained those in attendance with a humorous skit based on the life and responsibilities of a farm wife. A commodity drawing ended the event.

REGISTERED POLLED HEREFORDS
Twenty young cows (2 Beuchmark dams) and 10 (2 years old) heifers of the most popular and productive bloodlines. One third of these females bred AI to some of the best bulls in the country. (Twenty five to calf in March and April, five for fall calving). The rest bred to two excellent young bulls (by the Stick and Hotline).
These two bulls also sell, as well as five of their daughters from 1985. For more information, call:

Stake Bodies
by OMAHA STANDARD

Full time hauling demands equipment that withstands the punishment of rigorous work, day in and day out.

Omaha Standard Stake Bodies are engineered to meet tough hauling needs, regardless of cargo. Steel or wood racks, both feature heavy duty steel stakes.

Full width 96" platforms with swaged (indented) lights for better light protection and appearance. Spring-loaded rack connectors and automatic hold downs that keep racks in place and help reduce noise. Swing-out rack sections are optional. Stake racks fit both heavy duty standard and medium duty "Metro" platforms. Steel bulkheads with full width mesh windows are available.

There's no better stake body on the market. Ask someone who owns one, or better yet, compare us one-on-one with the others.

Farm Talk

By

Jerry Webb

There is a prevailing philosophy in this great land of ours that if a person works hard, he or she will be successful. A full time job will yield an income at least adequate for the basics of contemporary life.

Right now a lot of farmers are saying that's not so. That no matter how hard they work, for how long they just aren't making it. That there is an inequity in agriculture. These farmers feel the game is stacked against them, because a full time job no longer yields an income adequate for the basics.

But is that really the case? Are most of the failing farmers you read about fully employed? And how about you don't read about– the ones that are quietly sinking into debt without fanfare or headline.

Typically, the farmers who are going broke in the corn belt and even on the Delmarva peninsula are corn and soybean farmers. Their financial fate rests with the price of corn and soybeans. And most would agree that a difference in price starting in the early 80's has been their downfall. When the price turned, they tried harder to produce more corn and soybeans and to do it more efficiently– greater yields at lower costs per bushel. And still they weren't successful because the price per bushel continued to fall.

Four or five years of that kind of struggle has left them frustrated and many of them dead broke. But have they really come to grips with the problem? Given the current situation and the outlook for corn and soybeans over the next five or maybe even ten years– there isn't much chance for high profits growing corn and soybeans. And beyond that many farmers are just not fully employed.

When times were good a lot of farmers expanded very rapidly adding more acres, more equipment, more debt and more headaches. Then when the situation turned around they were forced to cut back. That meant giving up rented acres. Perhaps even selling or losing recently purchased land. The net effect– fewer acres to till but with the same amount of time available to do the work. Debt loads may have been reduced, risks and operating expense cut but nothing happened to assure any new income or to utilize the idle time resulting from some of those cut-back decisions. A farmer who considered himself fully employed tilling 800 acres can no longer make that claim farming 400. Not if he is still growing corn and soybeans.

And look at the other things that have happened along the way. Between their boyhood days and middle age where a lot of troubled farmers find themselves now there have been a lot of changes in agriculture. Changes that have made the farmer more efficient. Plowing ground with a two-bottom sulky plow and five mules as I did many years ago makes me painfully aware of the difference between how things were then and how things are now.

The farmer who was fully employed on 120 acres 50 years ago grew a variety of crops including feed for his horse power and he tended a wide range of livestock including dairy cows, beef cows, hogs, chickens, horses and maybe even sheep. Compare that to his son or grandson who may now be tilling 500 acres of corn and soybeans with a variety of large machines– self propelled and otherwise. That 120 acre farm that wa a full time job for father or grandfather is no more than 3 or 4 weeks work with today's technology. And 500 acres is by the longest stretch of the imagination 4 months work. So where is the full-time job? And where is the quarrel with the great American dream that a full-time job yields the basics of life?

Today's corn and soybean farmer may be doomed by the very technology that has created them. He can in fact control only so much land, machinery and capital and therefore, only manage so many acres devoted to corn and soybean production. In today's market, the maximum production from the most efficient of those producers is barely enough. And for those who are less than maximum the results can be downright disastrous.

There are farmers who have found a way to back out of the corn and soybean syndrome and develop other ways to broaden their income base. For some that has meant broiler production, vegetable crops, fruit trees, a roadside stand or some other agricultural enterprise. For others it has meant going beyond the farm gate to other activities and enterprises– like driving a school bus, building houses, selling agricultural supplies, becoming an auctioneer, hiring out to perform a variety of services needed in the agricultural sector or somewhere else.

Some farmers need to take a hard look at their corn and soybean enterprises and realize that the scope of their particular farming operations will never yield a good income in the current economic climate. The very best yields at current depressed market prices aren't going to make it. Those farmers have got to come to grips with that economic phenomenon and also come to grips with the fact that they are not fully employed. And that excess labor can be devoted to something else. Once those decisions are made, the opportunity for increased income is limited only by the skills and the imgaination of those farmers.

Montgomery County 4-H Showcase presents 4-H program

Montgomery County 4-H'ers recently held a 4-H Showcase at the 4-H center in Creamery. The event was designed to introduce the public to what 4-H has to offer.

On hand for the showcase were from left, Tricia Curtis, alternate dairy princess and vice president of the Western Mont-Berks 4-H Dairy Club; Magic the Cow; and Lisa Ruth, Montgomery County dairy princess. This trio distributed milk to guests and talked to visitors about milk's benefits.

Joe Lippy, one of the well-known and successful Lippy Brothers Inc. at Hampstead, MD. is pictured with Ray Layser of the Asgrow Seed Company. Joe and Ray discussed new varieties for 1986 and how they compare with the Asgrow varieties the Lippy's are using now. Good soybean growers continually look for the new variety which will do a better job for them. Joe is no exception!

Lippy Brothers have grown Asgrow brand soybean seed for about six to eight years. Joe doesn't recall exactly how long it has been. They plant about 2500 acres of soybeans each year, most of which are Asgrow's! Joe prefers Asgrow because it has good vigor - standability - holds into harvest by resisting shattering - and is dependable year after year. Joe's final comment is, "If there is nothing better, we don't fool with it.".

These farmers eligible for Conservation Awards

WASHINGTON – Farmers and ranchers demonstrating practical and innovative ways to conserve soil and water in their operations are invited to participate in a national soil and water conservation awards program.

This is the fourth annual awards program, sponsored by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and the Du Pont Company, which selects a conservation farmer/rancher from each state and awards $1,000 to each of the three national winners. In 1985, the national winners and spouses attended a special ceremony in the Roosevelt Room of the White House.

"The purpose of the awards program is to identify and honor those farmers and ranchers who are implementing sound, innovative and cost-effective conservation techniques," says Emmett Barker, chairman of the Endowment and President of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute. "These outstanding farmers and ranchers deserve special recognition and through this program their conservation initiatives are brought to the attention of others in agriculture and the public."

The top conservation farmer/rancher will be selected from each state by committess of farm, conservation and government leaders. The Endowment Technical Advisory Committee will then review the conservation work of the state winners, selecting up to 10 national finalists on the basis of their accomplishments in soil and water resource management and pollution abatement.

The national finalists and their spouses will receive an expense-paid trip to attend a national awards ceremony in the fall. Three national winners will be selected from among the finalists.

The winners in the 1985 program were from Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Washington. The other finalists were from Connecticut, Kentucky, Minnesota, Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina and South Dakota.

"Du Pont is pleased to sponsor the Endowment awards program because we believe the nation has no choice but to do a better job of conserving our soil and water resource base," says Dale E. Wolf, a Du Pont group vice president. "By focusing the spotlight on conservation methods and accomplishments of growers across the country, we can accelerate the achievement of that goal."

The National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation, established in June 1982, is a non-profit, privately funded, non-political organization dedicated to conserving natural resources and promoting a sense of stewardship for the land.

The following persons are eligible for the awards:

Connecticut – John Oros, State Association of Conservation Districts, RD#2, Box 165A, Route 6, Bethel, CT 06801, 203-743-5453; Delaware -- Lee Emmons, Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, P.O. Safety award illustrates Hawks 4-H Club's community spirit

COLLEGE PARK, MD. — You'd expect a paid professional worker to report good things about the agency which he or she represents. But when a nonpaid volunteer worker with wide experience gives a testimonial on the value of 4-H youth activities, you know it's not self-serving.

Such is the case with Elaine Shank, a rural, nonfarm homemaker near Welcome in southern Maryland's Charles County.

A former Cub Scout den mother, Elaine got acquainted several years ago with 4-H activities offered by the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service for youth in the age range of 9 to 19.

She became a volunteer adult helper with the Hawks 4-H club in her neighborhood and eventually became its leader. Under her direction, the club has won the statewide junior group award for two consecutive years from the Maryland Agricultural Safety and Health Federation.

The club's most recent honor was presented March 14 at Walkersville, MD., during the safety federation's twelfth annual dinner meeting. Mrs. Shank was present at the Walkersville fire hall to receive a recognition plaque on behalf of her club.

She also accepted a plaque on behalf of her son, Michael, 16, who was this year's state winner of the MASHF award to individual senior youth. Participation in a high school play prevented Michael from being present to receive the award in person.

In conversation afterward, Mrs. Shank noted that the prize-winning safety education activities of the club in general and her son in particular were excellent illustrations of leadership and community service instilled in youth by 4-H programs.

She says she is not surprised by the results of a nationwide poll taken last fall of 1,761 persons by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Agricultural Experiment Station with financial assistance from the Extension Service in the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

That randomly selected sample of individuals included 710 former 4-H members and 743 adults who had been members of other youth organizations. Some persons in the study had not been members of any organized groups during their younger years.

A key finding of the survey was that former 4-H members today are more active in community activites--particularly in leadership roles–than adults who had no 4-H experience.

The survey also showed that persons who did not participate in any youth groups during their younger years are currently much less involved as adults in community activities.

One reason for involvement in community activities by adults relates to the type of activities they had as youth, observes Merl E. Miller, assistant director of the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service with statewide responsibility for 4-H programs.

Dr. Miller notes that the nationwide Texas study showed former 4-H members giving higher rankings to personal development, knowledge, leadership and coping skills acquired than did former members of other youth organizations.

The study also indicated little or no difference in backgrounds, educational attainments and income levels among the nation's youth who were involved in organizations such as 4-H, Scouts, Boys and Girls Clubs, YMCA and YWCA, church organizations, FFA and FHA.

But the major benefit of 4-H membership, declares volunteer leader Elaine Shank, is that its diversity of project areas allows young people to be independent and develop self-reliance. And almost every project area, she notes, gives opportunity for growth in self-confidence through demonstrations and public speaking.

Safety, of course, is only one community service area in which Michael Shank and the Hawks 4-H club have participated during recent years.

Michael, a Lackey high school sophomore, also has been very active in 4-H horse and veterinary science projects. Both he and other members of the club sponsored rabies education clinics for the public at several locations last year.

Seeing her son develop from a relatively shy person to an outgoing community leader through his 4-H activities has made Elaine Shank's toil as a volunteer leader worthwhile, she declared.

Pesticide registration plan could penalize farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — An overly ambitious program to reregister pesticides could result in the loss of many products farmers need, the American Farm Bureau Federation told a congressional panel on Wednesday.

The remarks came in testimony before a House Agriculture subcommittee as Congress begins debate on major changes in the laws governing pesticide registration and use. For several years, Congress has been unable to rewrite the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, choosing instead to extend the law one year at a time. The last major overhaul was in 1972.

"The amendments set forth an ambitious schedule for the Environmental Protection Agency to complete the reregistration of existing pesticide products," said Mark Maslyn, a national affairs director for the American Farm Bureau Federation. "Most of the provisions of H.R. 4364 are acceptable and have little impact on agriculture. (But), there are several provisions that will have a detrimental effect on agriculture, either by increasing the cost of the pesticide product, or in some way affecting the availability of the product to farmers and ranchers. Of particular concern are the effects these provisions will have on producers of so-called 'minor crops'.

"As users who are in the first line of exposure, we support the objective of bringing all products up to date. We believe, however, that the timetable established in the legislation may place unreasonable expectations on EPA," he said.

Many pesticides were registered before EPA established stringent health risk review standards. Under the terms of the legislation, EPA would require companies to provide updated or missing scientific data. Farm Bureau is concerned that companies faced with expedited and rigid registration schedules and high registration fees will drop the product from the marketplace. "This is of particular concern to growers of minor food and feed crops as well as growers of nursery and ornamental stock," warned Maslyn.

Maslyn also stressed the need for liability protection for farmers in the use of pesticides. "There must be a measure of protection for individuals who conscientiously adhere to federally approved label directions and who employ generally accepted farming practices. At the heart of liability protection is the question of fairness, but in addition it just makes good sense from the environmental standpoint to provide added incentive to farmers and ranchers who can demonstrate they used the product according to federal label guidelines," Maslyn added.

Spain, Portugal are uncertain soybean markets

ST. LOUIS, MO — Ramiro Raimundo has a problem familiar to U.S. farmers: He can't make this year's business plans because his government won't tell him the rules of the game.

Raimundo's company, Iberol, is a soybean crusher in Portugal. Raimundo asked the Portuguese government for permission to import enough soybeans to meet his firm's needs through March. He was given clearance only through February because the government hadn't established the import rules for March and beyond.

Portugal, along with Spain, is joining the European Economic Community (EC) and that's creating problems not only for Raimundo but for U.S. soybean farmers.

Five U.S. farmers recently visited Raimundo as part of an American Soybean Association (ASA) trade mission sponsored by American Cyanamid. They were delegation leader and ASA first vice president David Haggard of Steele, Mo.; Wayne Bennett of Lonoke, Ark.; Jennings Cox of Columbus, Miss.; Tol Thomas of Cruger, Miss.; and Kenlon Johannes of Leigh, Neb.

The farmers wanted facts on what Portuguese and Spanish membership in the EC means for U.S. soybean farmers. What they found wasn't reassuring.

Both Spain and Portugal have been good markets for U.S. soybeans. In 1984-85, the U.S. sold 42 million bushels of soybeans to Spain and 20 million to Portugal. But now that could change.

"The EC appears to be imposing rules which will reduce U.S. soybean exports to Spain and Portugal for the next five years," explains Haggard.

Spain and Portugal produce lots of olive oil, which is already a surplus crop in the EC. So, as a condition of membership, the EC required Portugal to restrict soybean imports and required limits on soybean oil consumption in both countries. The EC also proposed a fixed price ratio between soybean oil and olive oil which makes soybean oil less price-competitive.

The Soybean Association wants these rules delayed. It says the import limits are illegal under international trade law, and cites the 1962 trade concessions in which the EC agreed to allow U.S. soybeans and soybean meal to enter Europe duty-free.

"Duty-free status has been a big factor in U.S. soybean sales to the EC," says Haggard. "If the U.S. government lets the EC get by with the illegal import restrictions for Portugal, it's going to be mighty tempting for the EC to extend these restrictions."

At stake for soybean farmers: Portugal is the United States' seventh largest soybean market. The EC is the United States' largest soybean market. Together, the 12 countries of the EC buy one out of every four rows of soybeans U.S. farmers produce.

Haggard says the U.S. government has been helpful so far in fighting the proposed restrictions, and a continued tough stand is essential. Soybean Association representatives have met with Clayton Yeutter, the Administration's top trade official and with officials at the State Department and other federal agencies. At the Soybean Association's Washington board meeting in March, more than 100 soybean farmers visited their Congressmen and asked for their help in fighting EC protectionism.

Haggard characterizes market development as promoting your product, gathering information about the market, and fostering and defending open trade policies.

"In this case, market development is market defense," says Haggard. "We've got to stand up for our right to sell soybeans to Ramiro Raimundo and our other customers in Europe. Our success in protecting our markets is crucial to our success as soybean farmers."

Lebanon County Parliamentary Procedure Contest

LEBANON — A team of FFA'ers from Annville-Cleona High School captured first place in the Lebanon County Parliamentary Procedure Contest held April 3 at Lebanon County Area Vo-Tech School. Second place went to the team from Cedar Crest, and third to Elco FFA.

The first and second place teams will advance to the area contest to be held at the Berks County Intermediate Unit April 16th.

The contest consisted of eight-member teams demonstrating parliamentary procedure in an FFA meeting. The team could bring up unfinished and new business, but the meeting could not last more than 20 minutes.

Judges for the event were Dale Hoover, Christine Williams and Dean Patches.

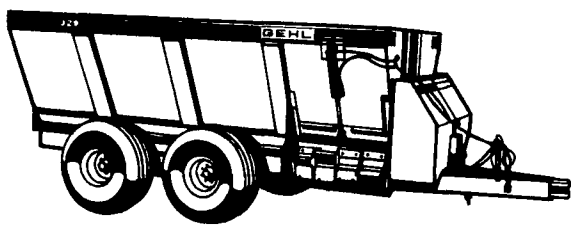
GEHL MODEL 315 SPREADER

Performance-proven



Solids, semi-solids, liquids, pen-packed, even frozen manure — you can spread them all with a new Gehl 300 Series manure spreader. Gehl's unique square-tube auger breaks up manure and blends it more thoroughly than conventional augers. And in winter you can park the auger in the "up" position, then power down to slice through frozen material. Variflo front, right-hand discharge gives you complete application control. And Uni-body construction lets you haul the heaviest loads. Stop by for a demonstration today!

Case International 94 Series Tractors

Exclusive Intelligence Center makes you and your tractor more productive

The exclusive Intelligence Center enables you to work more efficiently by monitoring vital tractor functions. Travel speed, engine and PTO RPM, total acres worked, acres per hour and much more are available in instant digital readouts. The optional True Ground Speed Sensor even tells you the percent of the wheel slip so you can select the most efficient gear and weight your tractor properly. It all adds up to getting more work out of each hour of time and squeezing more work out of each gallon of fuel.

All this, plus: High-torque power that's teamed with a smooth 12-speed power shift transmission for a job-right speed on every job (24-speed power shift is optional for the 2394, 2594); CON TROL PFC hydraulics that reduce parasitic hp loss; and the comfort and convenience that only the Silent Guardian cab can provide.

710 MULCH TILLER

Now you can take advantage of conservation tillage with as little as 60 horsepower

Stop in and take a look at John Deere's 710 Mulch Tiller—an economical conservation tillage tool that lets you fall-till in one pass with as little as 60 horsepower. You get a rugged 4x4-inch welded tubular-steel mainframe. Choice of straight-coulter or spherical-disk gangs. And rigid or optional spring-reset standards.

With 32 inches of underframe clearance, soil and trash flow through smoothly. Standard 3-inch concave twisted shovels (4-inch optional) bring ribbons of soil to the surface for aggressive tillage action.

Choose a 5-shank model, 6 feet 3 inches wide, or a 7-shank model, 8 feet 9 inches wide. Remember, John Deere's the leader in conservation tillage, and we have the equipment to meet your needs.

TORQUE AMPLIFIERS, ETC.

Serving Customers In 20 States Coast to Coast.

Complete TA assemblies for 706-1586 are priced at $595 and come with a Dana Co Heavy Duty Sprag instead of the usual IH sprag The Dana sprag is guaranteed for 2 years against failure. Sprag kits (includes sprag gear, Dana sprag, and piston carrier) and all items for rebuilding your own TA are available to qualified persons. Ramps and carriers for the older style TA's (as in SMTA, 340, 560) are priced at $150 each and carry a 90 day guarantee. We have all the parts needed to rebuild your TA in stock at prices that will save you money. We also have a shop available for complete TA installation. Or, you may split your own tractor and bring the center housing to us, which we can rebuild while you wait (approx. 4-6 hrs.). We also stock New and Rebuilt Water Pumps, Dynlife Clutches, Pressure Plates, and PTO Drive Gears, (Spline-fit into pressure plates) for most IH tractors and combines

No need to rely on others to pick your rocks — just hook up your Front End Rock Picker anytime and do the work of 8-10 men

When you are finished just pull the pins or release your QUICK-TACH and set the rock picking assembly aside until you need it again.

Picture below shows raking rocks in a river bed — this is a more difficult operation than average as rocks are under rocks.

ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

S & S Silo Service Has Experience
Over 160 Silos Have Been Relined With Shotcrete

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

The clear strength advantage of the new Calumet S-3750 spreader tank

You see it first in the "over-built" undercarriage.

We wanted an exceptionally strong 3 750 gallon liquid spreader tank. We got it by using the under carriage from our big 4 500 gallon spreader. We also used the bigger model s 18 x 22 5 16 ply tires on 4 inch spindles and 16 000 lb capacity hub. And like all Calumet tanks the new S 3750 features extra strength flanged heads and continuous finished welding of tank to frame (instead of skip welds).

The S 3750 operates from 540 or 1000 RPM PTO or optional hydraulic motor drive. It accepts our 2 or 4 shank soil injectors. Four wheel hydraulic brakes are controlled from the tractor cab. Liquid level indicator is standard.

And the price is right.

If you're thinking about a new tank, see the new competitively priced S 3750 at your Calumet distributor. Other models offer 2250, 3250, 4500 and 6500 gallon capacities. All are built strong as a Calumet by the strong company in liquid manure equipment.

USDA Ag Secretary announces red meat buy-out

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng has announced that the U.S. Department of Agriculture will begin purchasing 400 million pounds of red meat to help offset the impact of increased slaughter of dairy cattle under USDA's whole-herd dairy buy-out program.

Lyng said the new purchases, mandated by the Food Security Act of 1985, will be in addition to quantities of red meat normally purchased for distribution to the school lunch program and other domestic feeding programs.

The Act authorized the establishment of the dairy buy-out program in an effort to reduce domestic milk production.

Purchases of canned beef and ground beef will begin immediately, Lyng said. Purchases of other red-meat items will be timed to coihcide with slaughter under the termination program and to assist markets.

"Of the 400 million pounds to be purchased," said Lyng, "200 million pounds will be donated to domestic nonprofit charitable institutions for the needy, to nutrition programs for the elderly, to nonprofit summer camps for children and to other child-nutrition programs including the school lunch program. The remaining 200 million pounds will be exported."

Information on purchases for domestic use may be obtained from the Contracting Officer, Livestock and Seed Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250; telephone (202) 447-2650.

Information on purchases for export may be obtained from the Director, Dairy, Livestock and Poultry Division, Foreign Agricultural Service, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250; telephone (202) 447-8031.

Interested parties may request inclusion on the appropriate agency's bidder mailing list.

'Leaner' costs mean fatter pork profits

BY RICHARD BARCZEWSKI
University of Delaware

Economic periods like these are the key times to evaluate the profitability of your swine operation. Most of the reports that cross my desk indicate that profitability in livestock operations is poor to nil. I know this sounds bleak, but the shining light is that even though most producers are finding fewer and fewer profits in their swine operations, some are still making money.

How is this possible? I asked myself that question and came up with the following list of ways to cut costs, avoid waste and enhance profitability.

• Feed — This is the largest single operating expense in raising hogs. Feed costs can be reduced by shopping around for the least expensive source of feed grains and incorporating those grains into your rations. Make sure you consider the possible decreased efficiency some grains have compared to corn.

Feed wastage is a large problem on some farms and can be the major cause of reduced profits. Get into the habit of routinely checking your feeders for any sign of spilled feed and adjust them to reduce the waste.

Rodents can reduce your profits by consuming large amounts of feed while also damaging facilities. We're fortunate to have some very effective poisons on the market that are toxic to rodents only and relatively safe to use. Always read the label and follow directions when using any rodent poisons.

• Buildings and Equipment — One item that very few of us have much control over is our current swine housing. Generally speaking, we're forced to live with the buildings we have unless we're looking to build new or additional facilities.

Never renovate existing buildings or put up new ones without giving serious consideration to the current and future outlook of the hog industry. Most of us tend to be optimistic. We like to think that everything is going to be better in the future than it is now. Take a realistic approach to your facilities and you'll be less likely to get yourself into a long-term financial commitment you have difficulty meeting.

Equipment purchases can also snag your profits. Several producers I've talked with in my travels around Delmarva have told me they feel many of the economic hardships experienced by swine producers today were caused by frequent purchases of new equipment.

Equipment can often be repaired at a considerable savings when compared to buying new equipment. Push your pencil to see if repairing might be the answer in your operation and evaluate each situation as it comes up. Remember those payments on new equipment might be easy to make when hog prices are high, but can you make them when hog prices are low.

Also carefully consider the economics before buying any more land. If the truth be known, I'm willing to bet that most financial problems on livestock farms today are caused by over-extended budgets due to land and equipment purchases.

• Marketing — Most producers fall into the rut of selling their hogs or feeder pigs at the same place without regard to other markets. Always keep abreast of all market trends and don't be afraid to change your marketing strategies if the change will prove out to be advantageous to you.,

• Miscellaneous Purchases — Always shop around for the best buy. Our spouses are often more price conscious than we are, because of the grocery and clothes shopping they do. Know how many heat lamps, light bulbs, marking crayons and other supplies you normally use in a year and if you find any of these items on sale, be ready to buy your yearly quota. Become a smart shopper and don't buy items that you don't need. They can add up to quite an expense over the year.

Is there still a profit to be made in the hog business? Some of your counterparts say there is. Knowing your business is the key. Always analyze any major expense and avoid making numerous small purchases at a high markup. Buy only what you need and don't allow impulse buying to affect the profitability of your operation. Finally, market your hogs to your best advantage.

Delaware holds feeder lamb sale

Jennifer Crouse of Newark, Del., was pleased with the lamb she recently purchased at the feeder lamb sale held at Delaware State College's Hickory Hill Farm in Cheswold. The Delaware Sheep and Wool Producers Association held the auction to give 4-H and FFA members the chance to buy project lambs.

Preparing for Hot Weather

Bird comfort is extremely important for maintaining productivity. Hot weather, especially extended periods of hot humid conditions usually results in bird discomfort and loss of feed efficiency and egg production. Too often poultry producers have not prepared the poultry facility for that first spell of hot weather. The result can be undue loss of birds and production.

It is important to review the entire poultry house ventilation system and its preparedness prior to the first hot spell. The major reasons for providing a ventilation system in a poultry house are to 1) control temperature, 2) control the moisture within the building, and 3) provide an adequate supply of fresh air to the birds.

The ideal poultry house ventilation system provides continuous controlled air movement into, through, and out of the building. In addition, the ventilation system should provide for uniform distribution of air to all parts of the building. A properly operating ventilation system is essential for bird comfort. Servicing of selected components of the ventilation system and neglect of others results in poor performance of the entire ventilation system.

Preparing the poultry house ventilation system for summer weather includes servicing the inlets, fans, plus the controls for inlets and fans. The assumption is being made that the ventilation system is properly sized for the number of birds housed. If the ventilation system is improperly sized, no degree of servicing the components will result in proper summer ventilation. Following are suggestions for preparing the ventilation components for summer conditions.

Inlets

Inlet openings are the entry point of fresh outside air into the poultry house. The air intake openings are usually covered with screening of size that will prevent wild birds from entering the building. There is almost always air being pulled through this screening by the ventilation fans. Dust, feathers, or other debris caught by the screening will not normally fall away. They only serve as obstructions to entrap additional material. In all probability this screening has not been cleaned since last fall and should be cleaned immediately.

The baffle or series of baffles that prevents pulling air from the attic into the building through the inlets should be checked to assure they have not become dislodged and are firmly in place.

The inlet baffles should be operated manually to assure they open properly and are not binding at points.

Fans

Fans are the heart of the poultry ventilation system. Proper fan maintenance includes:

• checking to make certain all fans are operational and have been lubricated if required.

• cleaning the fan blades, orifices, and motors.

• cleaning and lubricating (use graphite) fan louvers.

• adjusting belt tension and replacing belts as necessary.

• stocking spare replacement fan belts.

Establish a regular schedule for servicing the fans during the summer months. Proper maintenance can increase the air delivery capacity of a fan by as much as 30 to 40 percent.

Controls

Dust should be removed from the sensing units of thermostats. Dust on these sensing units can act as an insulating agent and reduce thermostat sensitivity.

Most poultry air intake systems are regulated by automatic inlet controllers. These controllers use a manometer as the sensing device. The manometer in these units should be serviced. This includes checking the fluid level and calibrating the zero setting. Adjust the automatic inlet controller to maintain a .04-.06 static pressure in the building.

A small investment now can pay big dividends when the first hot spell appears.

Wye Angus sale yields $62,000

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The eighth annual sale of Wye Angus cattle held on Mar. 24, yielded $62,150 for herd owners, the University of Maryland Foundation.

With some 200 cattlemen in attendance, average prices for the sale's top bull and cow dipped below last year's prices. The top selling bull was Carillo of Wye, a Bondsman of Wye son purchased by David Freeman of Annandale, Va., for $2,900.

The high selling cow was Farrah of Wye, sired by Father of Wye, and sold to Chris Throne of West Point, Ga., for $5,900.

The sale's 25 yearling bulls averaged $1,156, and the 10 cows averaged $3,325. The overall sale average was $1,776.

Serving as auctioneer was Mike Jones of LaGrange, Ga.

1,900 attend Poultry Federation fundraiser

HERSHEY — Every year the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation showcases some of the nation's top entertainers at its annual fundraising banquet. And every year more poultrymen take advantage of the $100-a-plate event. This year was no exception.

The federation broke yet another attendance record, selling 1,920 tickets for the April 4 event, held for the fourth year at the Hershey Convention Center.

On stage this year were comedian Steve Landesburg, of the popular "Barney Miller" series, and perennial musical favorites, The Lettermen.

Also highlighting the evening was the presentation of a $5,000 check by the Adams County Poultry Association to the federation's scholarship foundation. Each year the federation awards three $600 scholarships to Penn State students majoring in poultry science or another food-related curriculum.

Rabbit Conference to focus on health topics

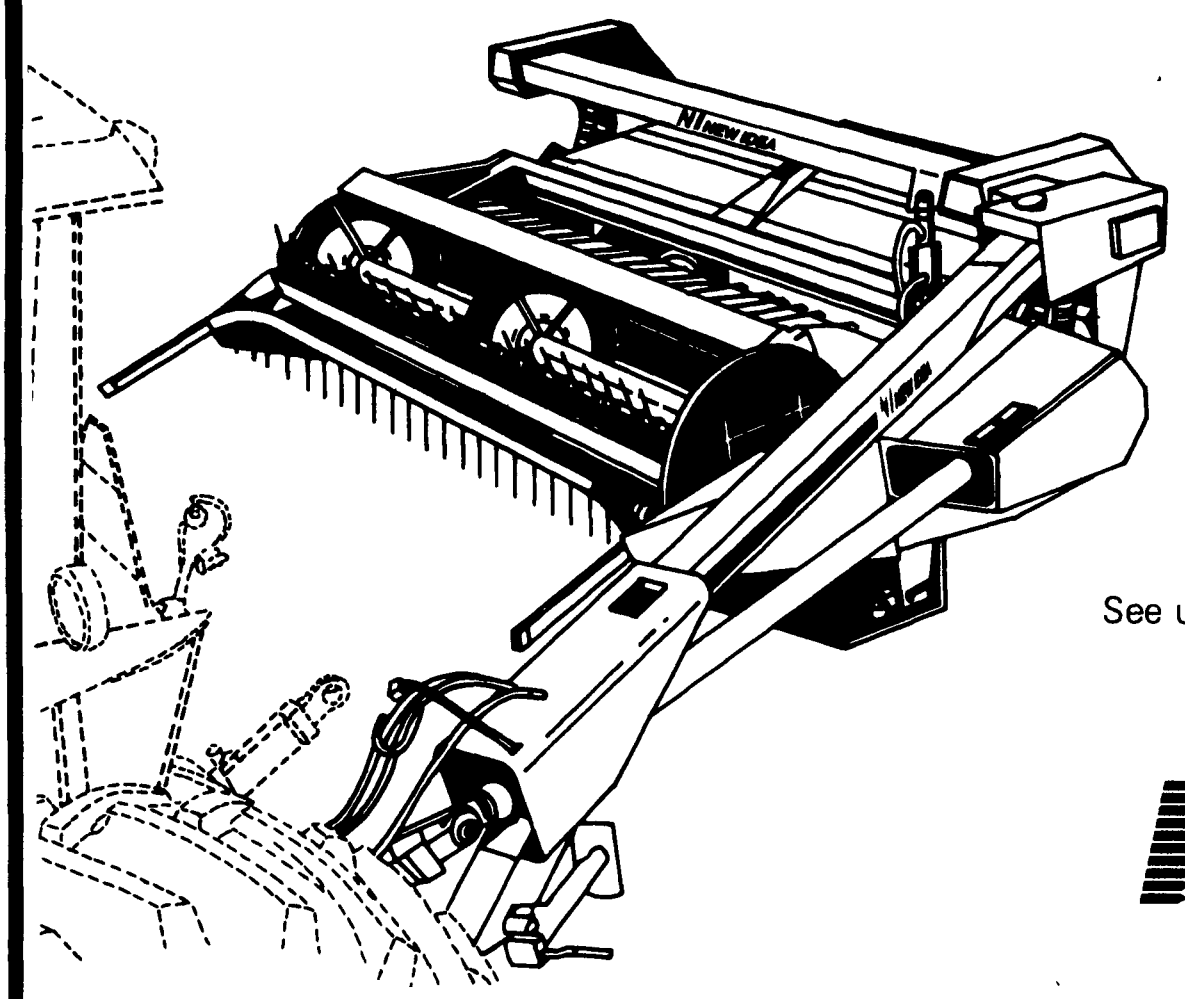
UNIVERSITY PARK — Improving rabbit health through better management will be the primary topic at Penn State's Rabbit Conference scheduled for June 13 and 14 at University Park.

According to Penn State Extension poultry specialist, Herb Jordan, raising rabbits is a thriving industry within the state. While only 50,000 rabbits were produced by the state's 2,000 breeders in 1970, today's 24,000 growers are producing some one million rabbits annually. Jordan predicts that rabbits will outnumber people here by the turn of the century.

For more information on the conference, write: Rabbit Conference, Short Course Office, 306 Ag. Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

STRONG ON VALUE

No matter if you choose the 7 or 9 foot model, you'll agree the New Idea mower conditioner is a superior value.



Features like:

- Enclosed oil bath balanced sickle drive for longer life
- Fixed position between cutterbar and rolls assures better conditioning
- Three-point header suspension system puts more crop in your windrow
- Rubber disc intermeshing reinforced rolls condition better and last longer

Poultrymen should use caution when purchasing chicks

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Because of a continuing avian influenza threat in the Northeast, backyard flock-owners are cautioned to use care when purchasing chicks this spring, according to Charles J. Wabeck, Extension poultry products specialist for the University of Maryland.

A good guide to use, says Dr. Wabeck, is the 1986 Small Flock Source List, now available free from offices of the university's Cooperative Extension Service throughout Maryland.

The publication lists sources of day-old chicks for egg and meat production, fancy purebred breeds, turkeys, ducks, geese, guineas, pheasants, quail and peafowl. It is published to assist owners of small flocks in finding suppliers who meet rigid standards of the National Pullorum-Typhoid Plan in the United States.

This plan insures that sanitation requirements are met, that parent flocks are healthy and that they meet pullorum-typhoid sanitation requirements.

Dr. Wabeck reminds growers that pullorum-typhoid is a contagious disease that can kill off large numbers of young poultry. It is passed from parents to offspring through the egg.

Purchasing chicks from reliable sources also will help to keep avian influenza out of Maryland, Wabeck declares. This virus disease can cause high death rates even among mature fowl. So its presence in background flocks would be a serious threat to nearby commercial producers.

Since poultry is now number-one agricultural commodity in Maryland, allowing the avian influenza virus to gain foothold could spell economic disaster on the state's farm scene.

As another precaution in the continuing fight against the dread disease, Dr. Archibald B. Park, acting state veterinarian for the Maryland Department of Agriculture, encourages small-flock owners to burn their cardboard shipping boxes after receiving and unloading day-old chicks.

Some more advice on handling day-old chicks:

Be prepared for your chicks when they arrive, Dr. Wabeck admonishes. Your brooding area should be draft-free, with a temperature of 85 to 90 degrees F. Water and balanced chick feed should be available at all times.

Raise your chickens away from adult birds to prevent transmission of disease. Remember that quality care is necessary to help chickens grow well.

More information on small flock management and health is available from offices of the Cooperative Extension Service in every Maryland county and in Baltimore.

Penn State students top NE Livestock Competition

UNIVERSITY PARK — Penn State students were the big winners in last month's North East Student Affiliate Livestock Competition at the Delaware Valley College in Doylestown. They won the first place all-around award.

In addition, Penn State's two animal judging teams took first and second place in the livestock judging contest. Duff George, a senior in animal production and son of Jimmie and Rosalie George of Carlisle, was named the "High Individual" in that event.

One of Penn State's quiz bowl teams placed second, while two students who competed in the speech presentations contest also took high honors. Jeff Brown, a senior in animal production and son of Richard and Delores Brown of Port Alleghany, won first place for his presentation on "Stocker Cattle in Pennsylvania." Michele Campbell, a senior in animal bioscience and daughter of Raymond and Janet Campbell of Butler, took third place for her paper on "The Pevention of Mastitis."

Forty-one students from Penn State's Dairy Science Club and Block and Bridle Club joined 127 other students from Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, and Delaware Valley College for the yearly competition., Penn State faculty members, Dr. Thomas Sweeney, professor of dairy science and Dr. Harold Harpster, associate professor of animal science, accompanied the students for the competition.

Student coordinators for the Penn State participation were Lolly Long, a senior in agricultural economics and rural sociology from Huntingdon, and Gary Fink, a sophomore in agricultural science from Jeannette.

April is National Lamb Month

DENVER, Colo. — Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng officially proclaimed April, 1986 as National Lamb Month as he signed a proclamation at the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Friday, Mar. 21.

The official proclamation signing was the kickoff of numerous state and local events honoring lamb and wool and other products produced by the American sheep industry.

Sheep were first brought to our shores in 1519 by Spanish explorers. Today, an industry with over 120,000 sheep producers nationwide has evolved from that first small flock. It is a vital industry of importance throughout our history, and an industry that today provides numerous jobs, contributes substantially to the economy and clothes and feeds consumers at home and abroad.

"Those involved in sheep production are pleased to have the opportunity to celebrate April National Lamb Month and to share and encourage the enjoyment of eating American lamb during this special time of year when it is such a traditional accompaniment to holiday and spring festivities," said Tim Indart, president of the American Sheep Producers Council, Inc.

"This is also a time for sheep producers across the nation to express thanks to their fellow Americans and friends for the continued support of the American sheep industry and American lamb and wool products," added Indart.

Simmental juniors schedule regional show

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Junior Simmental members have the opportunity to participate in five different events, four which are regional in nature and one of national scope, during May and June.

For the first time, Regional Classics, patterned after the National Summer Classic, will be held in all four geographic areas of the U.S. Competition will be uniform in all five. Junior members are encouraged to attend any Regional Classic that is most convenient. They are not limited to attend only the event being held in their region.

The Eastern Regional Expo will be held at Weston, W. Va., and includes those states east of the Mississippi. The ASA's Summer Classic VI is scheduled for June 23 to 27 at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center.

Individual and team competition is scheduled for a wide variety of events, all designed to provide both competition and beneficial learning experience. Events include: Public Speaking; Heifer Sales Talk; Sire Selector Quiz; Herdsman Quiz; Heifer Competition; Showmanship; Livestock Judging and Beef Bowl.

For more information, contact the American Simmental Association, One Simmental Way, Bozeman, Montana, 59715, telephone 1-800-548-0205.

Farm bill may impact corn, soybean, broiler prices

NEWARK, Del. – How will the 1985 Food Security Act (farm bill) affect profits from broilers, corn and soybeans — the mainstays of Delmarva agriculture — over the next four years?

"Though broiler returns should continue at satisfactory levels through 1989, both corn and soybean profits are expected to continue their downward trend through 1989," says University of Delaware extension farm policy specialist Gerald F. Vaughn. "Low profits, together with acreage reductions for Feed Grain Program participants, could cause Delmarva farmers to cut back on corn and soybean production, which could create deficits in local broiler feed supplies."

The economist bases his predictions on a report issued by the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute (FAPRI), at the University of Missouri and Iowa State University. Institute economists recently analyzed the new farm bill and projected its effects through 1989.

Their projections point to an increase in broiler consumption from 55 pounds per person in 1985 to 60 pounds in 1989. National broiler production would increase from 13.6 to 15.2 billion pounds. Lower feed costs would help stimulate this increase, resulting in wholesale broiler prices falling from 52 cents to 43 cents per pound.

According to these projections, feed costs would decline as farm prices for corn and soybeans became further depressed. FAPRI projects corn prices through 1989 to hover in the $1.94 to $1.99 per bushel range, or well below the 1985/1986 price of $2.47. Soybeans could range from $4.86 to $5.05 per bushel, compared to $5.19 in 1985/1986.

Though returns decline, loan rates and target prices for corn should make participation in the government's Feed Grain Program advantageous to growers, Vaughn says. Corn returns per acre over variable production costs (excluding land costs) are projected at $167.15 (1985/1986), $148.58 (1986/1987), $145.04 (1987/1988), and $137.83 (1988/1989) for growers who participate. Returns to non-participants are projected at $130.81, $60.88, $51.95 and $48.95, respectively. Returns per acre to soybean growers are projected at $102.72 (1985/1986), $74.61 (1986/1987), $78.27 (1987/1988), and $77.90 (1988/1989).

Based on these estimates, high participation in the Feed Grain Program is likely, Vaughn says. "As is the case with most major U.S. farm commodities, the future for corn and soybeans is one of excess production capacity relative to market demand. Stocks will remain high, and any rebound in exports will occur slowly."

Two factors which could affect these projections are oil prices and the value of the U.S. dollar. The FAPRI report was issued in February, and the analysis was conducted before petroleum prices began to fall sharply. If petroleum prices stay down, Vaughn says, farm production costs will be lower and net income higher.

It is also possible that the value of the dollar will drop faster than anticipated. Vaughn says this could stimulate exports a bit, though not much, due to the lag in the response of exports to price declines.

The FAPRI report also does not take into account impacts of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act for budget deficit reduction.

Congress already has modified the farm bill and more changes seem likely. So Vaughn urges farmers to pay close attention to proposed farm legislation in the months ahead, just as they did last year.

ABS publishes beef sire update

DeFOREST, WI. – "With the release of ABS' new 1986 Beef Sire Update, we're introducing nine new sires with unique features that bring more profitable genetics to your breeding program," Keith Vander Velde, American Breeders Service Beef Product Manager, says.

"For the first time, ABS is introducing Zebu semen from Brazil. Under a recently enacted health protocol between the United States and Brazil, we've been able to import semen from Fudacao Brazil-Pecplan, the largest and most respected Zebu stud in the world.

"The Update gives a detailed description of these sires, listing their winnings and performance data. If you want to introduce polled and pure strain Zebu genetics into your herd, you can choose from both elite Gyr and Nelore sires. There are also two other new Zebu breeds – Indu Brazil and Guzerat," Vander Velde says.

"Along with these new introductions, you'll find four other all-new ABS sires; new 1986 summary information on Polled Hereford, Limousin and Gelbvieh; and new show winning and performance data on well-known ABS elite sires. These include sires such as the number one Polled Hereford Weaning Weight sire, Awesome; the 1983 Grand Champion Simmental, Generation III; and the 1986 National Western Stock Show Winner, Ponderosa."

Get your free copy of ABS' 1986 Beef Sire Update from your ABS Representative or write American Breeders Service, P.O. Box 459, DeForest, Wisconsin 53532, or call 1-800-ABS-STUD, in Wisconsin call 1-800-472-4828.

BUSINESS NEWS...

Southeast Farm Credit holds annual meeting

OXFORD — Agriculture is going thorough some trying times and will face more problems before the end is in sight, association president Ken Risser told Southeast Farm Credit members at their annual meeting here last week.

"I don't think ag has seen the bottom," Risser said, adding, "The system will reflect the conditions of agriculture."

Some members, Risser said, have asked whether the government will assist if Farm Credit has problems repaying the bonds. With the Farm Credit Act of 1985, the association was assured of government backup, he explained.

One of the changes affecting Farm Credit today, Risser said, is the decision to put more money aside in provision for losses. In looking at the portfolio and debt risk, he said, "I took a fairly conservative perspective." The association will allocate more money at the local level to offset portfolio risks, he said.

Farm Credit's future includes a number of new developments, Risser said. These include working to develop a fixed rate and loan packages with adjustable rate mortgages. "If we're going to operate on a competitive basis, we must offer from both sides," he explained.

The association will also be taking a hard look at the structure of the system to determine if mergers would improve its situation. If study shows mergers would be beneficial, we can expect the directors to propose such a move, Risser said.

In other business, Southest Farm Credit members elected Jefferson D. Yoder, land bank director; Charles E. Frederick, PCA director; and Donald B. Needham, new landbank director.

Tri-County, Automatic team for open house

Tri-County Swine Systems and Automatic Farm Systems of 608 E. Evergreen Road, Lebanon, held their week-long open house program last week and offered a variety of informative speakers.

On April 1 the focus was on Tri-County Swine Systems.

•Dr. Mike Miller, Penn State, "Ways to Reduce Stress and Improve Efficiency."

•Ken Kephart, Penn State, "Guidelines for Culling."

•Bob McVicker, AAA Associates, "Pit Ventilation."

Tri-County Swine Systems manufactures solid swine equipment including solid steel gestation, farrowing, nursery and finishing facilities.

On April 2 the spotlight turned to Automatic Farm Systems. Company representatives were there and a program was offered throughout the day.

The morning featured two speakers from Penn State, Mitch Woodward and Doug Beegle, who spoke on the handling of manure in and out of storage systems and how to manage manure for crop needs.

A question-and-answer period followed, and after lunch the afternoon program began.

Dennis Skibo, Patz district manager, presented a silo unloader clinic. Then Carl Brown of F.M. Brown Mill took over and discussed managing feed rations for optimum economical performance.

Another question-and-answer session concluded the day's program.

Automatic Farm Systems custom designs systems and offers such manufacturers as Uebler, WIC, Farm Equipment, Inc., Lancaster Silos, Leading Edge, Steiner, GSI, Houle, Show-Ease, Sollenberger Silos, Roskamp Roller Mills, Fiberdome and Patz.

MF exec sees 'Ag Revolution' underway in '80s

DES MOINES, IA — The decade of the 80's is ushering in an agricultural revolution that is as important, and as significant, as the industrial revolution, or the mechanization of farming, according to Massey-Ferguson Vice-President Sales, Jack Murdoch.

He made these remarks during addresses to dealers attending the Carolinas and the Mar-Del-Va Farm & Power Equipment Dealers Association conventions in Charlotte, North Carolina, and Baltimore, Maryland, recently.

"There is no longer any question that the period we have just come through marked a significant and permanent change in our industry," said Murdoch.

"In 20 years, the size of a self-supporting farm has gone from under 50 acres to over 200 acres. In ten years, low-till and no-till have become accepted farming practice. In five years, labor efficient round baling has made great gains. And in three years, computers have become essential tools of modern farming," continued Murdoch.

Murdoch pointed out that for generations, any change in agriculture has been evolutionary. Products improved gradually; farming techniques changed slowly. "Now," Murdoch explained, "the one constant in today's world is change. We are in the midst of a revolution that...after years of resistance...is propelling farming into the twentieth century."

Farmer Of The Future

"The farmer of the future will be...in fact, already is...a better manager," said Murdoch. "Those who believed they were merely on the downside of a traditional market cycle are, for the most part, no longer with us today.

"Marginal farmers are being driven out by low prices, high operating costs, and competition from the new breed of agri-businessmen," he added.

"The most significant change in farming is occurring in the trend toward new priorities by the emerging 'farmer of tomorrow,'" emphasized Murdoch. "His decisions will be based on profit– not production. Farm size, land costs, machinery replacement, crops, planting and fertilizing techniques, yields, will all be determined with stronger emphasis on profit than on volume of production.

"The farmer of the future will make machinery decisions based on what economists call 'life-cycle costing'-- measuring the cost/benefit ratio of a particular piece of equipment over its entire product life, rather than deciding to buy based on extra cash from a bumper crop."

Dealer of the Future

Murdoch believes that farmers of the future will demand that dealers change their sales and service support functions. He noted that there will be fewer dealers in the future, and those that remain will be bigger, and will benefit farmers from better management, more professional selling, and economies of scale.

"The dealer of the future– and not very far into the future– will be a service oriented business. And I'm talking total service, not just shop service," Murdoch emphasized.

"He will sell systems and solutions to problems, instead of just iron and hardware. He will be a farm profit counseling resource for his customers.

"There is no question in my mind," continued Murdoch, "that within the next few years, the bulk of farm equipment sales will be made on the farm– will involve live demonstrations– and will consist of multiple unit sales."

He also emphasized that dealers and their salesmen must become skilled in knowing and using creative financing options other than purchase in order to meet farmers' needs.

Manufacturer of the Future

Murdoch pointed out that changes in farming and the farm buyer have forced changes in how tractor and implement manufacturers like Massey-Ferguson will serve the market. The most obvious change– there are already fewer manufacturers. There are also fewer brand names and specialty suppliers. Manufacturing capacities have been reduced, significantly and permanently across the industry, Murdoch believes.

"In the future, the emphasis will be on marketing a viable line of tractors and implements," Murdoch said, "manufacturing only those items and models it is economical and reasonable to build. Manufacturers will outsource other equipment, obtaining it at the best price and quality possible.

Murdoch also commented that a full line manufacturer of farm equipment no longer exists. Every manufacturer, including Massey-Ferguson, the western world's largest producer of tractors, is outsourcing, buying the machinery components and models that are needed from the best source at the best price.

Murdoch concluded, "I believe, when we look at the decade of the 80's, from the historical prespective of the 1990's and beyond, we will clearly recognize that these years– this period– was the end of one era and the beginning of another."

Deere introduces ground speed monitors

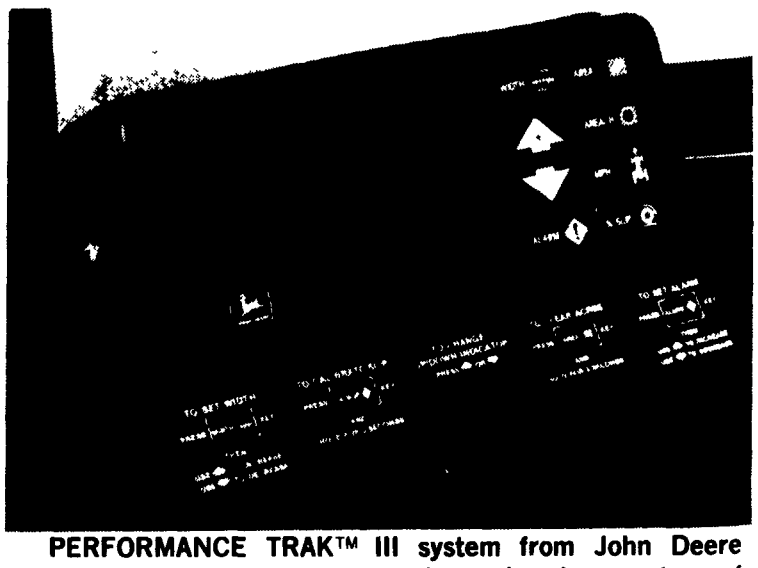
MOLINE, IL — John Deere has introduced three true ground speed monitors for field installation on tractors. The monitors provide valuable information in such areas as chemical applications where small errors in ground speed measurement may contribute to heavier-than-required rates of applications, raising the per acre cost of weed control. By knowing the true ground speed, such errors can be minimized and excessive applications eliminated.

There are three monitors in the new Performance Trak™ series, each designed to meet differing user needs.

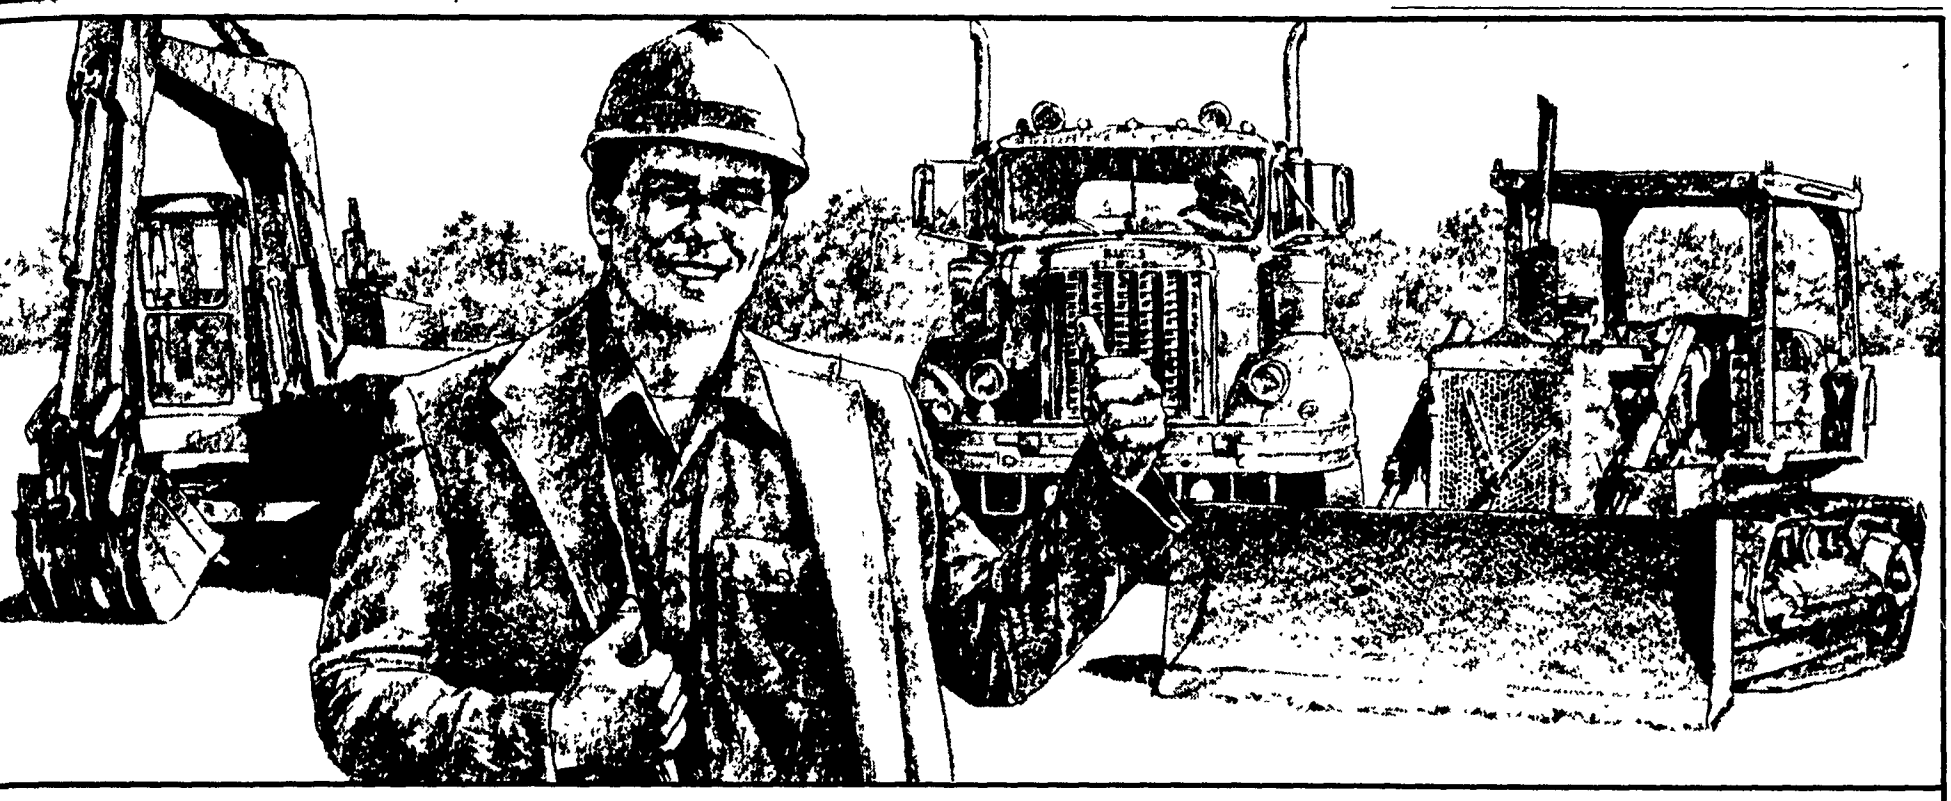
Performance Trak I monitors consist of a radar speed sensor unit, which mounts beneath the tractor, and wiring which connects the radar sensor to the digital tachometer on the dash of John Deere 50 series tractors.

Performance Trak II monitors can be used on any tractor. It combines the same radar speed sensing unit with a "mini" monitor which can be mounted above the dash of the tractor.

Performance Trak III is the deluxe model with the basic radar speed sensing unit plus a dash-mounted monitor and controls. It has capabilities for measuring wheel slip and, when implement width is programmed into its monitor, will provide information on area covered per hour. This is particularly useful in determining the projected time of completion of a known sized field. Performance Trak III can also be programmed to measure total area covered, useful for an accurate measure of field size.



PERFORMANCE TRAK™ III system from John Deere provides readings on true ground speed and percentage of wheel slip, and can be calibrated to provide accurate readings of area covered per hour and total area covered.



"I can't afford to have my equipment down. So I depend on Premium Green Diesel™. It makes a difference."

Maybe you still think all diesel fuels are pretty much alike. Maybe you don't know about the hard-working performance additive package in Premium Green Diesel from Agway Energy Products®. Dealers visit Vicon HQ

Hesston attachments prepare seed bed

HESSTON, Kn. — New finishing attachments for chisel plows and field cultivators have been introduced by Hesston Corporation, with the goal of giving farmers more flexibility to fit their specific needs. According to Dexter Schaible, Hesston Corporation tillage product manager, Hesston's options give farmers more choices than any other harrow attachments on the market.

The Hesston choices include a three-coil tine harrow, a four-coil tine harrow, a rolling basket/three-coil tine harrow combination, and a two rolling basket/one-coil tine harrow combination, Schaible said. When combined with a Hesston Field Cultivator, any one of these finishing attachments takes less horsepower to use and is cheaper to purchase than a secondary combination tillage tool, he added.

"Our finishing attachments will fit box beam sizes of three, four and five inches, making them adaptable to nearly all makes and models of chisels and field cultivators," Schaible explained.

To help conform to the terrain and give more uniform chemical incorporation, Hesston finishing attachments are available in sections ranging from 45 to 112 inches wide. All feature 16-inch tines with swivel action, which helps prevent the tines from breaking when backing. To adjust the down pressure for varying soil conditions and operating depth, Hesston relies on simple leaf springs with crank handle controls, Schaible said.

Hesston rolling baskets are among the best for use in muddy conditions, Schaible noted, because the open center helps prevent mud build-up. Each basket has eight high-carbon, steel blades and is 12 inches in diameter. Hesston baskets have a heavy duty design so they will stand up to the toughest conditions.

In operation, the single or double basket combination breaks clods, firms the seedbed and incorporates chemicals. The coil tine harrow following the basket further smooths the soil and mixes smaller clods with finer soil particles, also helping to insure complete chemical incorporation.

Clugston takes on Bobcat loaders

Clugston Farm Equipment, Needmore, Pa., has been named a dealership for the BOBCAT loader, according to James Brust, vice-president of marketing for the Melroe Company, Fargo, N.D.

Located at HCR 80, the new dealership is authorized to provide sales and service for Melroe's line of skid-steer loaders in the Needmore trade area. Warren E. Clugston is owner of the firm.

Melroe Company introduced the original BOBCAT, with its unique skid-steer drive system, to the front-end loader industry more than a quarter century ago. The company moved into the articulating loader business in 1981. Today Melroe is recognized worldwide as the leading producer of small loaders, both articulating and skid-steer. Clugston Farm Equipment is part of a network of some 900 BOBCAT dealerships in 75 countries.

Melroe Company is a business unit of Clark Equipment Company.

Farm Budget Short Sighted Educators Say

A national organization of agricultural college administrators says President Reagan's fiscal 1987 budget proposal for agricultural colleges is "short sighted" and likely to endanger the economic well-being of agriculture. The group calls for higher, not lower, spending.

In a 30-page report, the division of agriculture of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges predicts that decreased funding for science and education "will accelerate government spending — not curb it. Agriculture is in the midst of the most serious financial crisis since the Great Depression."

A national system of land grant colleges charged with research and education in agriculture was established under legislation signed by President Abraham Lincoln. It has played a key role in making America's agriculture the most efficient in the world, according to Dr. Jim Ozbun, dean of the Washington State University College of Agriculture and Home Economics. He is chairman of the 12-member committee that wrote the division's report.

"In the face of widespread devastation in agriculture, the president's fiscal 1987 budget proposal would decimate the agricultural science and education system that is the foundation of our past successes and holds the hope for solutions to the current crisis in agriculture," Ozbun says.

Dr. Donald F. Crossan, dean of the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences and director of the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, shares the concerns of Ozbun and his committee. "It seems obvious," says Crossan, "that a viable agriculture is our country's most important priority. We are not dependent on other nation's for food, and we must make sure we never are. But our food support system could easily begin to deteriorate, through neglect and misunderstanding of its needs.

"Maintaining this system requires sustained support for the farm sector. As in any business which depends on advanced technology and competition in world markets, agriculture requires ongoing basic and applied research, plus an information dissemination network and large numbers of well trained people to provide the services on which the modern farmer depends."

The report by the national group of ag college administrators illustrates the current crisis in U.S. agriculture with the following points:

* Farm profits have plummeted to half the $30 billion mark set in 1981.
* Agricultural exports have fallen 30 percent from a peak $44 billion in 1981.
* Nearly a fifth of the nation's farmers are in severe financial stress and a third of the outstanding agricultural debt is at risk, according to Federal Reserve estimates.
* More than 110 agricultural banks have failed since 1981, over 60 of them in 1985 alone.
* Hundreds of local, agriculturally related businesses are failing.
* Stress-related suicides, murders, divorses and family disintegration are occurring in rural communities.

To regain their competitive edge and re-establish viability, the national report says farmers and ranchers must have new cost-reducing production and management systems. The country's land grant based science and education system must develop these and transfer them to the point of need. Writers of the report believe President Reagan's proposal would endanger this process.

The agriculture division of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges urges that base programs in research and extension be increased 5 percent over the fiscal 1985 budget and that funds be restored for an important graduate fellowship program. While accepting the inevitability of cuts in some areas, the division recommends strengthening research and extension in three critical program areas: farm financial management and agricultural competitiveness, enhanced nutrition education, and water quality management.

The report includes three key recommendations:

* Increasing base research funds 5 percent above fiscal 1985. The committee's recommendation is for $302.3 million; President Reagan has propsed $244.4 million.
* A 5 percent increase over fiscal 1985 in funds for Cooperative Extension to deliver educational programs. The President has proposed a 59 percent cut in extension programs, which the report says "would destroy the capacity of extension to address the crisis" on America's farms. The committee recommends $375.5 million; the President has proposed $140 million.
* Restoration of $5 million is sought to fund 100 graduate fellowships to train scientists to help fill a looming shortage of teachers and researchers in the agricultural sciences.

Valiant essay winners named

Winners of "The Impact of Valiant" essay contest have recently been announced by cosponsors American Breeders Service, DeForest, WI and Holstein World, Sandy Creek, NY. Forty-nine high school and undergraduate college students vied for the $2000 in prize money.

Recipient of the $1000 grand prize, plus a trip to the National Holstein Convention in Milwaukee, WI, is Dennis M. Rottinghaus, Rottinghaus Holstein Farm, Seneca, KS. A sophomore at Kansas State University, Rottinghaus will receive his award at the junior awards brunch on Wednesday, July 2, in Milwaukee.

Second and third place awards of $600 and $400 went respectively to David Janson, Pierz, MN, and David Borchardt, Random Lake, WI. Janson, a University of Minnesota sophomore majoring in agricultural education, is a member of the crew of the Reinhard Janson & Sons Dairy.

Sixteen-year-old Borchardt is in his third year at Random Lake High School.

Honorable mention entries were submitted by Kristi Aarsvold, Peterson, MN; Scott Bernick, Walcott, IA; Erin Branstetter, Tyrone, PA; Louis Maberry, Sulphur Springs, TX; Brett Obert, Dakota, IL; Alison Place, Wapakoneta, OH; Matt VanBuren, Leetonia, OH; Craig Will, Underwood, MN; Michael Wolfe, Richfield Springs, NY; and Jimmie Yeoman, Dover, OK.

The scholarship was funded by Holstein World and ABS who each contributed $1 for every record by a Valiant daughter over 25,000 milk, 1000 fat or 800 protein in 365 days or less. All sons and daughters classified Excellent also pulled $1 from each sponsor into the scholarship fund.

Judging the essays were Jeff Winton, an agricultural accounts manager for Ken Schmidt Co. Inc., a leading Milwaukee, WI advertising agency; Barbara Lee, the present director of marketing for Brown Swiss Enterprises Inc.; and James Evans who heads the Office of Agricultural Communications & Extension Education at the University of Illinois.

Where farmers' ideas take root.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett

BUDGET YOUR CROP COSTS

Where there is a will there is often a way. How many times I heard that old adage from my mother when I was a child. It often came after a plea "but Mom, I can't do that because it is too big." She would say "Think about it a bit and you will be able to figure a way to do it." I would stew and procrastinate for awhile. Then she would say we're going swimming in an hour or we're going to eat in an hour and there will be no dessert until you get that done. That usually was enough of an incentive for me to put on my thinking cap and figure out how to do the job she knew I could do all along.

A number of farmers feel they cannot get the necessary money to put out spring crops this year. In many cases they are only partly right. Most dairy farmers can find a way to get spring crop money if they just put on their thinking caps and concentrate. Many other farmers can also come up with their basic needs. No, it will not be an easy task and you, like myself, may find it easier to procrastinate than to get down to the job of coming up with the necessary cash. Let's see if I can give you some incentive in the way of ideas.

Budget your needs — if you think you need $10,000 and only have $4,000 available, you may have to do some serious pencil pushing. Put priorities on each crop and each field. Then put priorities on the inputs such as seed, nitrogen, weed control, other fertilizer, lime, etc. Now start putting the two together. Perhaps a half of a ton of lime per acre will be sufficient for that corn crop instead of the ton and a half. Do you really need to plant that much corn? Perhaps putting 10 acres in reserve or keeping 10 acres in grass would make more sense while you are cash short. Maybe some of that rented land should be let go. It will probably be less expensive to buy the corn this year than to grow it. Put your whole effort and crop dollars into a smaller amount of land and try for better yields instead of maximizing the acres you run over.

Take a good look at your soil tests — could you go with just nitrogen rather than use the complete works? You could if the P and K were up to medium. You may be able to cheat a little even if they are lower. What about the alfalfa stands? Are they really alfalfa or are they really mostly grass? Perhaps 50 pounds of nitrogen would do more good than the full amount of fertilizer called for on your soil test report for alfalfa. One place where you can not afford to slip up is in weed and insect control. Even there you could possibly reduce costs if you knew specifically what weeds and insects you had to control.

Extra money — many times I work with farmers who say they have no money to buy spring crop needs. I then start looking for surplus assets. It is surprising how often I am able to locate these surpluses. It may be a few surplus heifers, or a couple of steers that were being raised to make the family fortune, or some machinery that is seldom used (you may not think about that item in the back shed, but look things over). It may be some surplus hay or corn. I agree that those items are all priced below cost now and it hurts to sell them at a loss. So what are you going to do, stand around and moan about lack of cash to buy crop needs, or grit your teeth and sell off those underpriced assets to get the cash you need to proceed with the job of farming?

What are surplus heifers? It is difficult for a farmer to sell off heifers that were born on the place regardless of the cow they are out of. Sometimes a farmer who is really interested in staying in business for the next ten years must make decisions based on economics not sentiment. Is it not better to sell some of the animals now so the rest can be fed than to sell them all later? Surplus heifers are those animals that exceed your normal turnover by more than 10%. Surplus heifers are also those animals that cause the young cattle housing to become crowded. Surplus heifers are fine to keep if you have the money to keep them and the room to do a good job of growing them. Think about the cost of keeping those replacement animals. Even with today's cheaper feed, you will still have between $700 and $1,000 cost to raise each animal to freshening. That is not counting a lost sale value for the calf or a charge for labor for you.

Farmers urged to reduce pesticide exposure

NEWARK, Del. — Accidents involving agrichemicals are increasing, according to state surveys. "So this year, as farmers prepare for their spraying programs, they should take time to protect themselves from potentially harmful agrichemicals," says Ron Jester, University of Delaware extension safety specialist. He advises investing in safety equipment before handling any farm chemicals, especially those that are known to be toxic.

"People need to be educated to the short term and long term consequences of exposure to chemicals," says Jester. "Some chemicals that have been available for years are now being removed from the market because of the potential health problems they can cause."

The Environmental Protection Agency is reviewing several heavily used chemicals and requiring label changes regarding safety and health precautions. For example, acephate, long considered safe for both farm and home use, has been found to convert in the bloodstream to a chemical 40 times more toxic than the original compound. There is also evidence that health problems can develop from secondary exposure to pesticides, such as coming into contact with contaminated clothing during laundering.

"This doesn't mean that farmers should quit using agrichemicals," says Jester. "But in light of new research they should be using safety equipment to reduce exposure."

"Some farmers resist using protective equipment because they don't want to wear more clothing or carry extra equipment when they're working long hours or the weather is warm. There's also the tough guy factor — some people think they don't need extra protection. But properly fitting, comfortable safety gear is available and the benefits to personal safety and health are enormous."

Researchers at Rutgers University used a fluorescent agent in pesticides to demonstrate how easily a user can be exposed. Ultraviolet light revealed areas of contamination that occurred even when a worker was reasonably cautious. Jester says the pictures from this study are enough to convince anyone of the value of protective gear.

The equipment does have some limitations, the specialist says. Respirators can be dangerous for asthmatics, hyperventilators and those with high blood pressure or heart disease. In extremely hot weather, protective clothing can contribute to heat-related stress. But for most people, the benefits far outweigh the risks.

"Protective clothing and respirators really do reduce chemical exposure," says Jester. "But they don't help after a person has been exposed."

To locate safety equipment suppliers, Jester suggests checking the yellow pages of the telephone directory, or contacting the county extension office.

A.O. Smith cuts expenses to cope with stressful '80s

BARRINGTON, IL — The managers of A. O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc. have presented the details of how the company is responding to the stressful conditions in farming and agribusiness.

At the recent annual meeting of North American Harvestore system dealer personnel in Chicago, President Jack Estes described cost-cutting measures through which the company has brought operating expenses down to levels that can be supported by current sales, and Jim Schaap, executive vice president-marketing, gave details of a new, five year sales strategy.

The meeting's theme was "Moving Ahead," a motto that may seem inappropriate in a period when the company has been forced to make cutbacks. But as Estes explained, "These actions are positive steps and in the right direction," in view of the present state of the farm economy.

Estes noted that while Harvestore Products has not been profitable recently, "we have been doing things that profitable companies in other industries are doing — such as investing in capital equipment, developing new products, and improving critical facilities and processes."

At the same time, Harvestore's management recognized the need to reduce expenses, rather than waiting for the farm economy to improve.

"The reason for this choice is that we believe the changes which have occurred in agriculture are structural, not cyclical, and it's unrealistic to expect a dramatic recovery in the next year or so," Estes noted.

The Harvestore executive outlined key areas of cost reduction, including a 45 percent cut in the company's total office and manufacturing space.

The company has sold its former headquarters building in Arlington Heights, IL and taken out a ten year lease on a smaller amount of office space in nearby Barrington, IL.

Even more significant, all of the company's manufacturing and parts distribution operations are being consolidated at the company's main plant at DeKalb, IL. Two other facilities have been closed, including an automation equipment plant at Eureka, IL, and a parts distribution facility in Chicago. Operations of an unloader and manure pump factory in Elkhorn, WI are now being transferred and that facility will be phased out by the end of 1986. Carrying out all operations at a single location will yield significant cost reductions.

Estes noted that although budgets for engineering and marketing have been sharply reduced, they remain above historic levels in terms of percent-of-sales. He explained that "regardless of sales level, certain sales functions must be performed — and key engineering development projects must continue regardless of business activity. Engineering is an investment in future business."

Staff reductions have also been made, Estes said, adding that "after some tough evaluation we derived an organization that we are confident will support our business strategy."

Dealer personnel learned details of a new marketing strategy from Jim Schaap, who said that Harvestore has been forced to make "many difficult but realistically prudent decisions."

As a result, he told dealer personnel, "We are more able to support your business strategies and to significantly improve our own financial performance."

Jim assured his audience that a key objective is to assure the continued existence of the Harvestore system dealer organization. He observed that the company and its dealers have "a unique business relationship that has been, and is, second to none in agribusiness."

Schaap and Estes outlined a five year plan that includes continued emphasis on new product development, targeted marketing, and investments in new capital equipment to further reduce costs.

"Our strategy is to further improve our competitiveness in the markets we serve," Estes said. "Our plan is to be profitable again in the near future. The company and its dealers have the people and the products to make this a successful plan."

Expert says dairymen don't cause pollution woes

NEW HOLLAND – It's not fair to blame North American dairymen for river and stream pollution problems if they control erosion, says Howard Winey of New Holland. Most dairymen have ample land for manure disposal.

But many confinement hog and poultry operations are headed for difficulty. It's the same story almost everywhere intensive systems are in use.

In the Netherlands, for example, nearly a third of the country has been placed off limits for hog and poultry expansion because of the manure problems. More manure is already produced than can be used by the crops that can grow there, explains Winey, who is product manager for spreaders at New Holland.

Since they have too much manure slurry, they are hauling it to other areas up to 120 kilometers away – that's 75 miles for the tank truck. The Dutch complain that they're "up to their necks in slurry."

Legislation limiting the size of livestock and poultry operations can be predicted anywhere off-farm pollution problems are caused, says Winey. It could happen here, too, he adds. Some farmers are causing a problem even if they don't have animals, he points out. This is because soil erosion carries off plant food nutrients in the soil no matter whether the nutrients come from manure or from chemical fertilizer. Environmentalists often aren't really sensitive to this reality.

When livestock and poultry numbers are limited to produce just the amount of manure that the crop land can use without excess build-up, the problem stays controlled, providing erosion is controlled.

Animals on pasture are almost never a problem because the numbers just aren't concentrated enough to cause a manure problem. When a dairy is pastured even part of the year, the overall manure disposal problem usually doesn't get out of hand.

It's estimated a large Holstein dairy cow will produce a maximum of 474 pounds of nitrogen, 142 pounds of phosphate and 237 pounds of potassium in a year's time. That's assuming the cow never goes out to pasture.

But much of the nitrogen is in the form of ammonia and is lost to the atmosphere, unless it is stored as a liquid or treated with phosphate. Not nearly the entire amount is available for crop production.

Winey points out this also means that the potential amount of nitrogen that could wash into streams and rivers is also much less than the total amount produced.

Where erosion is controlled, dairymen usually aren't causing problems and it's unfair to blame them for the problems caused by large swine and poultry operations that have already created serious ground water nitrate problems in a few places.

Unless other solutions are found, the confinement hog and poultry operations may face the need to move their manure longer distances to farms that can use additional manure.

Gehl major sponsor in 3rd Forage Analysis Superbowl

NEW BRIGHTON, MN – Grand prize in the haylage division for the WORLD'S 3RD FORAGE ANALYSIS SUPERBOWL will be a season's use of Gehl's CB 10604 Forage Harvester. This is the second year Gehl Co., West Bend, WI, has sponsored a grand prize in this international forage contest.

"Continuing to sponsor the grand prize in the haylage division of the WORLD'S 3RD FORAGE ANALYSIS SUPERBOWL is consistent with Gehl's development of the highest quality forage handling equipment," according to Gehl president, Bernard Nielsen. "Investing in the future of agriculture is not new to Gehl Company," Nielsen noted. "We've been doing it for the past 127 years. And we're committed to continue our investment by providing the most technologically advanced forage harvesting and handling equipment available."

HOLSTEIN WORLD, the University of Wisconsin, World Dairy Expo and Wisconsin DHI are sponsoring the WORLD'S 3RD FORAGE ANALYSIS SUPERBOWL to focus dairy farmers' attention on the need to evaluate forage production techniques.

Stanley E. Bird, vice-president marketing for HOLSTEIN WORLD explains that "Upgrading forages gives dairy farmers an opportunity to increase efficiency and profitability in today's unstable dairy economy." And Bird cites university research (including analysis of forage samples submitted in two previous WORLD'S FORAGE ANALYSIS SUPERBOWL contest) which shows high quality forage can produce hundreds of pounds more milk per cow without substantially increasing feed costs.

Dairy farmers throughout the United States and Canada are invited to enter their 1986 first or later cutting hay or haylage samples in the WORLD'S 3RD FORAGE ANALYSIS SUPERBOWL.

Entries with the best analysis results will be ranked and awarded a share of over $30,000 worth of commercial products. Winning samples will be displayed at World Dairy Expo, October 1-5, 1986. Awards will be presented at the winners' luncheon at Expo on October 5.

Entry blanks and contest rules will be available in the May 10 issue of HOLSTEIN WORLD, or you may request them from HOLSTEIN WORLD, 1405 Silver Lake Road, New Brighton, MN 55112, Phone: 612/636/2117.

Grand prize at Forage Analysis Superbowl will be a season's use of this machine from the Gehl Company.

Pennsylvania bulls enter young sire program

7H3046 Len-Lyn Bova Anton-ET and 7H3050 Earlyndell Quick Profit are two young sires that have been chosen to enter Select Sires' Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) Sire Sampling system. Based on their outstanding pedigrees these young bulls have been selected as one of 150 Holstein bulls from throughout the United States to enter the program in 1986.

7H3046 Len-Lyn Bova Anton-ET was bred by Galen Crouse, Stevens, Pennsylvania. He is sired by Rockalli Son of Bova, the breed's highest active PDM sire. The dam, Diamond-S Wapa Classy, is an Excellent (90-2E) Conductor daughter with a January 1986 cow index of + 913M + 48F + $133.

Her first three records are all over 4.0% test with a top record of 5-6 365d 27,640M 4.5% 1,250F. The grandam is a Very Good (86) Gold Medal dam with three records over 28,800M and 1,000 fat and lifetime credits of 143,120M 3.7% 5,232F. The next dam is also Excellent (93-3E) Gold Medal with records up to 28,702M and 1,139F.

7H3050 Earlyndell Quick Profit was bred by Earl S. Weaver, New Holland, Pennsylvania. He is sired by Air-Osa Oak Quick Shot, one of Elevation's finest udder improving sons. The dam, Earlyndell Jack Heidi Dusty, is a Very Good (87) Walnut-Lane Admiral Jack daughter with a January 1986 cow index of + 1300M + 45F + $151. She has been consistently a 4.0% tester with a fine four-year-old record of 26,510M 1,047F. The grandam also has over 1,000 fat with 29,533M as a five year old.

Hunter Education shooting contest scheduled

HONESDALE – The first annual Hunter Education Shooting Championship is scheduled for May 31, at the Irem Temple Country Club, Dallas.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Game Commission, in cooperation with the Wayne County Sportsmen's Association, the contest is intended to bring together hunter education students from Pennsylvania to test their knowledge and skills related to hunter education.

This regional championship will include competition in .22 rifle, archery and shotgun marksmenship. All participants must have taken a Pennsylvania Hunter Education Course.

Two age groups are being used for this championship. They are: senior division, 15 to 18 years of age and junior division, 12 to 14 years of age.

Winning team members will be awarded trophies and will represent Pennsylvania at the National Rifle Association's North American Hunter Education Championship to be held at Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base, in North Carolina, on July 23 to July 27.

For additional information about the Hunter Education Shooting Championship, contact the Wayne County Extension Office at 253-5970, extension 114.

Reduced-till grain drill introduced by Krause Plow

HUTCHINSON, KS – Two models of a new flexible grain drill designed for use in reduced tillage seedbeds have been introduced by Krause Plow Corporation, a 68-year old manufacturer of conservation tillage equipment.

"As tillage specialists, we know what type of field surface will be left by any given type of reduced-tillage implement," explains Floyd Barkman, Krause Advertising and Sale Promotion Manager. "Consequently, we have taken that knowledge one step further, and designed a grain drill compatible with those field conditions. The resulting grain drill is an ideal addition to the Krause Profit-Till System.

The two models in the new 5000 Series flexible drill include one with hoe openers and another with double disc openers.

This new drill features an 8" square tube main frame and a unique 15 foot long 7" square tube telescoping hitch.

The double disc version, Model 5130, is available with a unique opener option for planting precision: walking tandem wheels. The walking beam configuration provides a gauge wheel in front of each disc opener and the traditional press wheel behind to continually assure seed placement at a uniform depth in all types of terrain. The 13½" double discs are staggered 5/8" to provide better penetration and cutting ability. Disc spacing includes 6", 7½", 8", and 10". Each double disc opener will move vertically over 12" to follow rough terrain. Rubber press wheels include a single smooth 2" x 13", double-V smooth 2" x 13" single smooth 4" x 12", and V-grooved 4" x 12".

Model 5030, the hoe drill, comes with a choice of spring tip or shear bolt hoe drill openers mounted alternately on 2 ranks spaced 24" apart. Both have 21" under-the-frame clearance and come with 10" or 12" spacing. Massive springs feature adjustable pressure to maintain a constant working depth. Competition drills use only the weight of the drill which varies as grain is used. The shear bolt opener is 1¼" wide for good trash clearance. The spring tip has a 10" trip height and 250 pound point load for rocky conditions. Both openers feature a precise V-slice alloy point for excellent seed placement and big 3" x 21" steel press wheels.

Another feature unique to the 5000 Series is a hydraulic rear fold for a narrower roading width. The 30-foot working width is reduced for the disc drills to 14' or 15' 3" for hoe drills when the two-section unit is folded. The drills can be folded with completely loaded seed boxes, since all six 12.5L x 15" 8-Ply tires carry the load. Tires are spaced wide on the frame for excellent roading stability.

Simplified hydraulics lift only the openers while the seed boxes remain in a fixed position. With the openers raised both drills have a full 10" of clearance between openers and the road.

The drills also have fluted feed seed cups which are self-adjustable to allow for varying grain sizes and seeding rates at maximum accuracy. One lever dumps all the cleaning gates on each grain box. No need to rotate shafts for cleaning. The seeding rate adjustment is spring loaded so an adjustment can be made without rotating shafts to clear grain. On the double disc model, the seed tubes are smooth and straight for a direct fall to the openers, greatly improving seeding accuracy over corrugated tubes.

The grain boxes have 2½ bushels per foot capacity, with an extra wide opening for ease of filling. An optional adjustable partition divides the seed boxes into two compartments for applying dry fertilizer while planting. Standard equipment are seed level indicators, and shaft monitors, which are mounted on the tractor for easy viewing. An acre meter is also standard. Bifold markers with shear bolt breakaway protection are available as an option.

The new Krause equipment is available at C.B. Hoober and Son, Inc., Intercourse.

USDA announces preliminary tobacco referendum results

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Tobacco growers have disapproved marketing quotas for Maryland, cigar-filler and cigar-binder tobaccos and thus are ineligible for federal price supports for these tobaccos for marketing years 1986, 1987 and 1988, according to preliminary results of a mail referendum released today by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Quotas were last in effect in 1965 for Maryland tobacco, grown in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania. Quotas have never been in effect for cigar-filler (type 41) tobacco, grown in Pennsylvania. For cigar-binder tobacco (types 51-52), grown in Connecticut and Massachusetts, quotas were last proclaimed for the 1985-87 crops, but these quotas were rejected by growers in February 1985. Quotas for cigar-binder tobacco were last in effect in 1983.

In a concurrent referendum, growers approved quotas for Virginia sun-cured tobacco for marketing years 1986, 1987 and 1988. Quotas were last proclaimed for this tobacco for the 1983-85 crops and were approved by a 91.6 percent majority of growers.

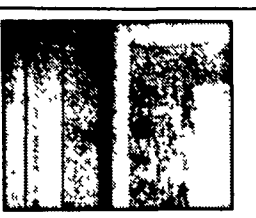
Tomorrow's Building At Today's Price!

All new Morton Buildings now include the most popular design features.

PROTECTION LINER
The OSB Liner Panel installed between the steel panels and the framing serves two functions: 1) inside the building, it prevents bumps from equipment, tools, etc. from denting the steel siding, and 2) outside, it greatly reduces denting and panel defacing from bumps occurring from every day use.



ROOF OVERHANGS AND VENTA RIDGE
The vented overhang-vented ridge system provides additional building air flow, allows for a future ceiling with proper attic ventilation, and improves building aesthetics.

PLASTISOL PAINT ROOF PANELS
Plastisol is an exceptionally thick (.4 mil) premium quality coating with a proven record of providing superior durability and long lasting protection against red rust (backed by a 15 year written warranty against red rust).

To take advantage of this price, we ask your cooperation with the following: Provide a level building site; furnish unloading help; participate in our 3 payment plan and accept delivery and erection at Morton Buildings' convenience. Also note, travel expenses will be added if your building site is more than 40 miles from the sales office. Ask about our optional Energy Performer Liner & Insulation Package. For a complete explanation of this offer and a tour of Morton Buildings in your area, contact the nearest sales office.

A 42'x10'x75' building includes: 18' wide double end door with weatherseal kit, two walk doors, three windows with shutters, two foot overhangs sides and ends, roof vent-a-ridge, filler strip at peak base & eave, Plastisol roof panels, OSB protection liner, weatherwane, gutters and downspouts, meets all snow load requirements.

Move out of lodgin

Finally, a proven way to prevent lodging in your high-yielding wheat and barley crops—CERONE® ethephon plant regulator.

Used in Europe for over a decade as an effective anti-lodging agent, CERONE is now labeled for use by American growers.

When applied between growth stages eight and ten on the Feekes-Large scale, CERONE brand will produce shorter and stronger straws—even at high nitrogen rates. And when your grain is standing strong, you'll recover more of it at a lower cost.

CERONE ethephon plant regulator also helps speed up your combining time, so that you can put your labor and your machinery to even more productive use. And those shorter straws will put less wear and tear on your harvest equipment, too.

Don't wait any longer. If you grow wheat or barley, make this the season you finally move out of lodging...and into CERONE.

WHY UNIPEL®

20-10-10/24-8-8/21-7-14

fertilizer is great for planter applications:

Is one of your aims to produce high corn yields while reducing fertilizer application rates and expense? Then consider a planter application of high N analysis UNIPEL fertilizer to yield the best return on your fertilizer dollar. Where soil test P & K availabilities are high to excessive, use UNIPEL 20-10-10 or 24-8-8 through the planter to supply the 20 to 40 lbs./A. of phosphate and potash necessary for a vigorous corn start, and at the same time, supply most or all of the N your corn crop will need to produce a top yield. This program has been proven effective compared to traditional high rate broadcast programs. Get together with your UNIPEL dealer to find how the planter application can YIELD RESULTS.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Here's A Timely Tip...

Apply lime often for best results

To keep your soil neutral, liming every 2 or 3 years is recommended, because of the new higher analysis fertilizers being used today

FACT

PROWL® effectively controls triazine-resistant weeds.

Triazine-resistant pigweed and lambsquarters can pose a severe threat to your crop. That's why we recommend you use PROWL® herbicide. PROWL gives you effective control of these resistant weeds, plus velvetleaf, fall panicum, giant foxtail and 19 other grasses and broadleaves. Do NOT incorporate PROWL in corn.

ALUMINUM GOOSENECK TRAILERS

ALUMINUM EBY GOOSENECK TRAILERS, Standard Specifications:

LENGTHS AVAILABLE: 14' to 28' (longer lengths available as option)
WIDTHS: 96" Standard - 102" Optional
HEIGHT: 6'6" Standard - 7'6" Optional

A versatile, lightweight, Eby aluminum stock trailer is built to provide years of maintenance free service. An Eby trailer is custom built to fit your individual hauling needs - No mass production! We use only quality components and strong alloy aluminum to manufacture what may be the last trailer you'll ever buy.

CONSIDER THE FEATURES OF AN EBY ALL-ALUMINUM TRAILER

LIGHTWEIGHT
Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload

MAINTENANCE
Eby aluminum trailers won't rust Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs

DURABILITY
Eby trailers are built tough Quality components of 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer

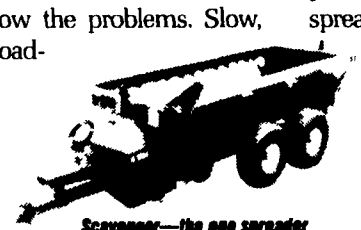
You should spread manure as efficiently as you store it.

Modern manure storage systems may have rendered your conventional spreader obsolete.

You know the problems. Slow, sloppy load-outs from storage. Uneven spreads that leave "hotspots" all over your fields. And design limitations that let your system's benefits run right out your spreader's leaky endgate.

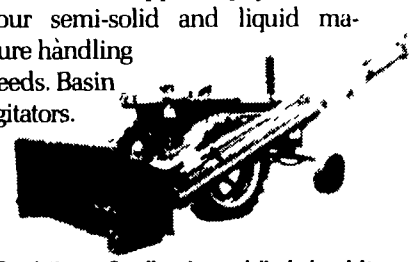


Scavenger—the one spreader for the two-spreader farm.

Now you need equipment to handle your manure as efficiently as you store it. Equipment that gets you into the field faster. And lets you spread when it best suits you and your crops.

Hedlund/Martin manufactures specialized equipment for today's manure handling needs. Tough Scavenger spreaders with unique, patented, square-auger design to spread most kinds of manure—liquid, semi-solid, pen pack, even hog and poultry—all year 'round. The Vanguard spreader and Equalizer loader, specially-designed to make fast work of loading and hauling semi-solid manure. Or the large-capacity LT to spread liquid manure quickly and evenly over all kinds of terrain.

And Hedlund/Martin offers a full line of support equipment for your semi-solid and liquid manure handling needs. Basin agitators.



Revolutionary Equalizer is specially-designed to efficiently and easily load semi-solid manure.

Basin pumps. Submersible pumps. All designed for convenient operation and low maintenance. Ruggedly built to stand up to hard use—year after year.

Stop by your local Hedlund/Martin dealer for a demonstration or write Dept. H-2, Hedlund/Martin, Inc., 841 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067, for free information.

MMI General Manager Announces Staff Reorganization

STRONGSVILLE, OH – In order to streamline operations and better serve its members, Milk Marketing Inc. has announced a staff and department realignment. The announcement was made by General Manager Gordon Riehl and is effective immediately.

"The purpose of the reorganization is to reduce our costs, provide services that our members request, and do a more efficient job of communicating with our members and employees," said Riehl.

No new senior staff level positions were appointed. Two senior positions have been vacated since Jan. 1, 1986. David Thomas, former MMI director of member services, is the new president of the American Institute of Cooperation, Washington, D.C. Don Chew, former director of customer relations, is retired.

Further reorganization is pending in three areas — quality control, hauler relations and field training.

Most changes occurred in the member services area. Rod Carlson, previously responsible for MMI's marketing operations only, will now direct member services and marketing. Reporting to Carlson are the division managers from MMI's six division offices; the manager of support activities; and the new position of quality control manager.

Carlson has been involved in the marketing of milk for 18 years. Before coming to MMI in 1983, Carlson was an agricultural marketing analyst for the Land O'Lakes Cooperative, Minneapolis, and a milk marketing specialist for the market administrators in Denver and St. Louis.

Also included in the re-alignment is MMI's farm supply department, which will now come under the supervision of Don Schriver, MMI director of member relations and public affairs. Schriver has had previous experience with farm supply management at the Ohio Farmers Inc., Fostoria, OH and Universal Cooperatives in Minneapolis.

Other activities that will now originate from member relations are meeting planning and the Young Cooperator program. Bill Hardesty, named manager of member relations, will oversee these activities. Also Ann Emerich was named manager of communications.

Producer payroll and membership records will switch from member services to finance and administration, according to Merle Koppenhafer, director of that department.

MMI is a 8,300 member dairy farmer owned cooperative encompassing an eight state midwestern area including Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, Kentucky, Maryland and West Virginia. Last year MMI marketed more than 4.3 billion pounds or 500 million gallons of milk.

Ag Research group funds 15 projects

HARRISBURG – The Pennsylvania Agriculture Research Committee has recommended renewed funding for 15 ongoing projects totaling $297,223, according to state Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Grubb.

Eight of the projects are being conducted at The Pennsylvania State University. They include:

- Management of Nitrogen and Phosphorus, $5,703
- Increased Utilization of Leaker Eggs, $5,436
- Nematode Control, $5,312
- Mushroom Germplasm Enhancement, $21,840
- Potato Storage Evaluation, $25,092
- Peach Tree Hardiness, $25,000
- Layer House Cleaning, $25,120
- Phosphorus and Potassium Soil Tests, $39,475

Six projects are being conducted by research specialists at The University of Pennsylvania. They include:

- Swine Pseudorabies, $5,600
- Protein Degradability, $18,800
- Dairy Herd Analysis, $24,745
- Trichinosis Control, $17,000
- Shipping Fever In Feeder Calves, $23,100
- Reproductive Failure in Pigs, $19,600

Analysis of Agriculture Resource Management practices is being conducted at The Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture. Cost of the project is $35,400.

Funding for the projects is contingent upon passage of the 1986-87 state budget containing agricultural research funding as proposed by Governor Thornburgh, said Grubb.

Members of the Agricultural Research Committee include Secretary Grubb; Senator Edward Helfrick, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee; Senator Patrick J. Stapleton, Minority Chairman of the Senate Committee; Representative Samuel Morris, Chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee; Representative Carmel Sirianni, Minority Chairman of the House Committee; Deputy Agriculture Secretaries J. Luther Snyder and Kirk Wilson; Fred Wertz, Acting Director of the Department's Bureau of Agricultural Development; Ben Mader, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Harness Racing Commission; and Charles Trimmer, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Horse Racing Commission.

LET AgTec HANDLE ALL YOUR SPRAYING NEEDS

wrap around protection

AgTec's rotating vegetable head gives complete coverage with wrap around protection. 190 MPH Air Stream carries mist-size droplets that penetrate and cling, even to the undersides of leaves. Without leaving the tractor seat you can rotate the head 270° to spray with the wind and adjust the deflector for swaths up to 60 feet, with AgTec low volume efficiency you'll reduce chemical and fuel costs, and spray more acres a day. The rotating head is available on 3 pt. hitch and pull-type AgTec sprayers with PTO-drive. See us today for a demonstration.

GPI Expands Line of Turbine Flow Meters

WICHITA, Kan. – Great Plains Industries has expanded its line of electric digital meters with 1-inch, 2-inch and low-flow models. These new meters are applicable for agriculture, pest control, lawn care, chemical processing, and industries measuring petroleum products.

New flow rate meters and totalizer meters are now available for flow rates from 0.3 to 300 gallons per minute or metric equivalent, with pressure ratings from 50 to 800 PSIG.

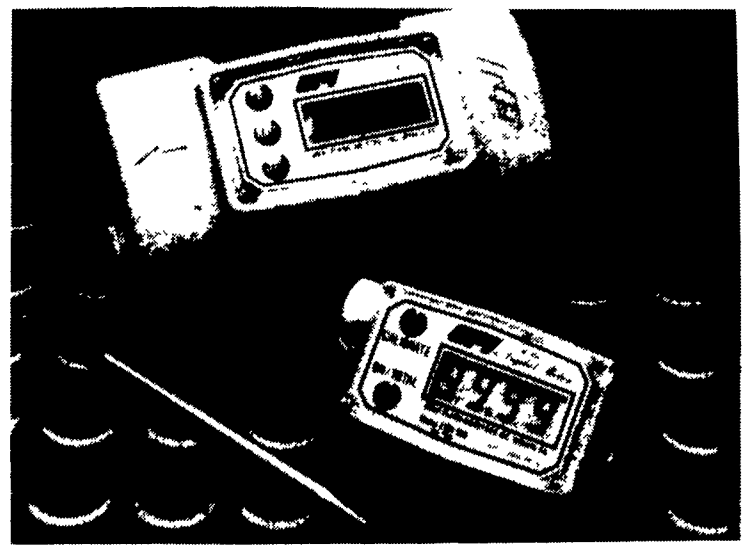
Meters manufactured of aluminum, 316 stainless steel, polypropylene, and fluoropolymer offer compatability with most any fluid.

Unit features include permanent factory calibration, plus simple field calibration for universal measurement of non-viscous or viscous fluids with accuracy of plus or minus one-half percent.

Power is supplied from two lithium power cells with life expectancy of 5,600 operational hours. GPI offers a low cost power cell replacement service. An automatic on/off feature on the meters conserves energy.

The unique design of a complete meter, including turbine assembly, microprocessor, and six-digit readout in one compact package, offers more flexibility in meter utilization and at a cost of less than most turbines alone.

For further information about the Great Plains Industries digital meters, write the company at 1711 Longfellow Lane, Wichita, Kan., 67207; or call toll-free 1-800-835-0113; telex 417 357 GT PLAINS WIC.



Here's the new 2-inch and 1-inch EDM300 Model electronic digital meters from Great Plains Industries.

Don't move gypsy moths!

ANNAPOLIS, MD – According to national statistics, more people move their household in June than in any other month of the year. If you are one of the many persons that will move out of Maryland this year, be sure you don't take gypsy moths with you. A Federal quarantine regulates the movement of articles, including firewood and outdoor household articles such as lawn furniture, that may carry the gypsy moth.

People moving from Alleghany, Baltimore, Carroll, Cecil, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Kent, Montgomery and Washington Counties, the City of Baltimore and parts of Caroline, Garrett and Queen Anne's Counties are affected by the United States Department of Agriculture's Gypsy Moth Quarantine. The movement of firewood and outdoor household articles to areas west and south of Maryland is regulated by the quarantine and such items must be inspected and either be certified free of the gypsy moth or be treated prior to moving.

According to Charles Staines, an Entomologist with the Maryland Department of Agriculture, regulatory officials in several states have expressed concern about the movement of regulated articles into their states. California has the authority to fine both the owner and the carrier of uncertified or infested articles attempting to enter California. The maximum fine for violating the California law is $25,000.

The homeowner can perform the inspection (self-inspection) of regulated articles or inspection can be done by a certified pest control operator. Contact the Maryland Department of Agriculture at 301/841-5920 for a self-inspection booklet, for the names of companies in your area that perform these inspections, or for additional information about the Gypsy Moth Quarantine.

"Urlaub auf dem Bauernhof" says the sign in German to attract tourists to four farms, of the Stollwitz family 1.5 km distant, of the Wassermann family "with comfort rooms", of the Zankl family with bio-products (all natural!), warm water facilities and shower, and the Zojer family with vacation cottages. These were just a few of the sights last year in the annual Delaware Farm & Dairy Tours to Europe, says Dr. George Haenlein, Extension Dairy Specialist with the University of Delaware and tour leader. Another tour is planned for next August to Switzerland, Northern Italy, Northern Yugoslavia and Austria (Zurich - Venice - Triest - Vienna) and is not limited to Delawareans or farmers. A few seats for $1395 are still available. To make reservations, contact Dr. George Haenlein, 048 Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303 or phone 302-451-2522.

A. "Our herd average increased about 1800 pounds the first year we were on ProTek. It's up 2000 pounds now, and we have some cows that have increased 3000 to 4000 pounds. We're on DHIA, and before we started ProTek, our herd was at 16,250 pounds with 602 fat. A year later it was 18,050 and 652 fat."

B. "The cows are healthier. It seems like ProTek really works good. It gives us cheaper protein and the vet bills are down to pretty near half. Our test is way better too. I figure between the vet bill and the test, ProTek is paying for itself. On top of that, we don't have anywhere near the breeding problems we used to have."

C. "We didn't expect any miracles, but our production has continued to go up. ProTek has also increased our butterfat, and I'm super pleased. We were at around 16,000 pounds, and we've increased to 18,500 pounds of milk. We believe in it."

D. "My cows began to come up, and they've been coming up ever since we went to ProTek nine months ago. We're looking at about 1500 pounds increase, and we're still on the same basic management program. We're peaking early and going to maintain at a higher level. It's working. I think that's proof enough.
